The Frye and Lafler Decisions: Effective Assistance of Counsel Before Entering the Courtroom

In March of 2012, the Supreme Court jointly decided Missouri v. Frye, __U.S. __ , 132 S. Ct. 1399 (2012); and Lafler v. Cooper, __ U.S. __ , 132 S. Ct. 1376 (2012); holding that plea negotiations were a critical stage of the criminal proceedings, requiring effective assistance of counsel. This program will analyze these important issues, consider the federal rule in light of New York's Constitution, and challenge the attendees to consider different consequences and scenarios where these cases may be utilized in seeking relief for your client.
