Rob is an Associate in the Gerber Ciano Kelly Brady, LLP's General Litigation, Construction, Transportation, and Product Liability Practice Group, as well as an active member in its Municipal and Government Practice Group. He has years of experience practicing in both the State Courts of the State of New York as well as the federal court system. He has represented his clients through all phases of litigation, including trials and appeals. Rob has his OSHA-10 certification and is very familiar with the safety measures required on a construction site. The OSHA-10 certification gives Rob a unique perspective when it comes to defending New York State Labor Law §§ 200, 240(1), and 241(6) claims. This insight, combined with his years of experience litigating construction claims, empower him to zealously advocate on behalf of property owners and contractors in this often high exposure area of litigation.

Rob represents clients on complex litigation matters and catastrophic injury cases. The focus of his practice is construction accident litigation, transportation, premises liability, and products liability. Rob represents some the largest construction companies in the industry. He has successfully defended major trucking, bus, and limousine companies, and he regularly advocates on behalf of one of the largest commuter railroads in the worlds. In addition, he defends numerous municipalities and incorporated villages across Long Island.

Rob earned his Juris Doctorate from Touro Law School where he graduated magna cum laude. During law school, he earned awards in categories of Constitutional Law, Evidence, Justice, Sales, and Criminal Law. He graduated in the top seven percent of his class. Rob attended Colgate University in Hamilton, New York for his undergraduate degree, and he remains active in the alumni organizations at both Touro and Colgate, as well as Chaminade High School in Mineola, New York.

In his personal time, Rob enjoys spending time with his wife, Alexis, and their daughter, Isabella. He has a love-hate relationship with the game of golf. He and his family enjoy the outdoors and love to get away skiing as often as they can. For some reason, he has remained a lifelong Buffalo Bills fan and gets to as many games as possible.
