

Carol L. Moran has worked at the Brooklyn District Attorney's office since 1983, and handled her first animal cruelty case that year. After many years as a trial attorney and trial supervisor, she served as the Director of Training for nearly ten years and now has a wide variety of administrative responsibilities as a Deputy District Attorney. In 1995, District Attorney Hynes sponsored a metro area task force dedicated to improving the investigation and prosecution of animal cruelty and fighting cases, which Carol still chairs. She also heads the animal crimes unit DA Hynes created, with staff dedicated to monitoring Kings County cases, and conducts training for attorneys, law enforcement and the public on case prosecution and the link between animal cruelty and human violence. She lives in Queens with her family, which includes one dog - with whom she will soon resume humane education lessons in Brooklyn's elementary schools - and 7 cats. .... 5 of which are fosters looking for forever homes, in case you know of anyone!!!
