Introduction
by Sarah Diane Mc Shea

The original Planning Ahead Guide was published a decade ago and quickly became one of the NYSBA’s most popular publications. Recently a subcommittee of the Law Practice Management Committee updated the Guide, replacing citations to the old ethics rules with current references to the Rules of Professional Conduct and revising the model forms to reflect, among other things, changes in the law and some of the newer technologies used by many practicing lawyers. The result, we hope, is as “user friendly” as the original Planning Ahead Guide. The Guide includes free downloadable forms in Word and Wordperfect and links to many of the cited references. The Guide will remain a work in progress, as we welcome suggestions and feedback from lawyers in New York and other jurisdictions as they work with this publication.

The original Planning Ahead Guide was written by the NYSBA’s Committee on Law Practice Continuity, chaired by David R. Pfalzgraf, Esq., a leader in the profession and the inspiring helmsman of the Law Practice Continuity Committee’s work in assuring that lawyers prepare for the future and ensuring that there are safety nets for their clients and families when they have not done so.

The Planning Ahead Guide was the Law Practice Continuity Committee’s first significant achievement. Its second significant achievement was its proposal of the Uniform Caretaker Rule to provide the necessary authorization and guidance for the appointment of caretaker lawyers to serve in emergency situations when disaster befalls a fellow member of the Bar. Although the proposed Uniform Caretaker Rule has not yet been adopted by the Appellate Division, it has nonetheless served to alert the courts and the legal profession to the need for guidance and court involvement in many situations when lawyers have not taken sufficient steps to plan for the future. Copies of the proposed model rule and the Committee’s supporting memoranda are available at www.nysba.org/ProfessionalConduct.

Special thanks go to the members of the Law Practice Management Committee’s Subcommittee on Law Practice Continuity for their commitment and insights in updating the Planning Ahead Guide: Marion Hancock Fish, Patricia Spataro, Henry E. Kruman, Robert L. Ostertag, Anthony R. Palermo, Marian C. Rice, John R. McCarron, Anthony Q. Fletcher and Joseph F. Saeli, as well as William H. Roth, who assisted the Subcommittee in revising the updated Guide. Particular thanks go to the hardworking dedicated staff at the NYSBA, especially Katherine Suchocki, Jessica Patterson and Simone Smith, without whom we could not have completed this task.

We would remiss if we did not thank the leadership of the NYSBA for encouraging and consistently supporting the work of the Committee on Law Practice Continuity and the Law Practice Management Committee over the past twelve years. The original members of the Committee on Law Practice Continuity, which was responsible for the original Planning Ahead Guide and many continuing legal education programs around the State, included David R. Pfalzgraf (Committee Chair); James M. Altman (the original thinker behind the project), Francis X. Carroll (who has helped many lawyers in New York cope with personal and professional disasters), Anthony E. Davis, James F. Dwyer, Jeffrey M. Fetter, Susan F. Gibraltar, S. Jeanne Hall (one of the chief authors of the original Guide and a leading light in the profession), Paul M. Hassett, Douglas C. Johnston, Kim Steven Juhase, Anne B. Keenan (to whom the original Guide was dedicated), Steven C. Krane, Anne Maltz, Sarah Diane McShea, Mark S. Ochs, Robert L. Ostertag, Timothy J. O’Sullivan, Anthony R. Palermo, Michael Philip, Jr., the Honorable Eugene F. Pigott (then a justice of the Appellate Division, Fourth Department, and a consistent source of wisdom and practical guidance), Barbara F. Smith (one of the best draftsmen and most thoughtful Committee members participating in the project) and Leroy Wilson, Jr. Special thanks and gratitude must go to former NYSBA staff member Terry Brooks, whose fortitude and dedication insured the publication and excellence of the original Planning Ahead Guide.

And, finally, we dedicate this current edition to Gary Munneke, the former Chair of the Law Practice Management Committee, whose outstanding work and astonishing level of commitment was appreciated by all involved in this update project. I sincerely apologize to those who contributed but who inadvertently are not included here. The fault is mine and later editions will correct this unintentional oversight.

How to Establish an Advance Exit Plan to Protect Your Clients’ Interests in the Event of Your Disability, Retirement or Death

Revised and updated by the
New York State Bar Association
Law Practice Management Committee
Subcommittee on Law Practice Continuity

It is not easy to think about circumstances that could render you unable to continue practicing law. Unfortunately, accidents, illness, disability, planned or unplanned retirement, and untimely death are events that do occur. Under any of these circumstances, your clients’ interests, as well as your own, must be protected.

Although there are no specific requirements in the New York Rules of Professional Conduct specifying the steps a lawyer must take to protect his or her clients in the event of a sudden inability to continue in practice, several Rules and Comments, along with general principles of attorney professionalism and fiduciary duty, provide guidance on this issue. It is clear that there is a duty on the part of the attorney to protect his or her clients from the adverse consequences of such an event. For example, a lawyer who “neglects a matter” may violate RPC 1.3(b). By arranging in advance for the temporary management or closing of your practice, your ongoing matters will be handled in a timely manner and there will be less likelihood that a court date will be missed or a closing delayed (for example, because of an inability to access your escrow account), or clients’ interests otherwise prejudiced. Funds and property belonging to your clients will be returned to them promptly, as required by RPC 1.15(c). You also will be assured that your clients’ files will be protected and that your office bookkeeping records will be maintained as required by RPC 1.15(d).

Attorney professionalism is often equated with dedication to clients, service, competence and the display of good judgment. By formulating a plan today, you will be fulfilling your ethical responsibilities and your obligations of attorney professionalism. The information in this Planning Ahead Guide is designed to assist you in protecting your clients and your practice.

Following this introduction and overview are materials and model forms to assist you in this process. The Guide will help you to properly protect your clients and your practice if you personally are unable to act. To assist you in designing your Advance Exit Plan, this introduction refers by name to the forms and documents that are included in the attached Appendices. Appendices 1 to 2G in this Guide, for example, provide you with some frequently asked questions (FAQs) and checklists which raise issues that should be considered in making plans to protect clients’ interests in the case of the sudden unavailability of a sole practitioner to manage his or her practice, or in closing one’s own office or that of another attorney, or in temporarily assuming responsibility for another attorney’s practice.
Establish an Advance Exit Plan

STEP 1: Designate an Assisting Attorney to manage or close your practice in the event of your disability, incapacity, retirement or death. This may be accomplished by a limited power of attorney, a comprehensive agreement with detailed powers, or a short form authorization and consent form to close or manage a law practice. Samples of such forms are set forth in Appendices 3, 4, and 5. If you are a professional corporation, resolutions may be necessary authorizing you, as sole shareholder and director, to appoint another attorney to manage or close your practice (See Appendix 6).

STEP 2: Prepare written instructions to your family, your designated Assisting Attorney, your nominated executor, and your key office staff containing:

- General information and guidance to minimize uncertainty, confusion and possible oversights;
- Authorizations to release medical information (required by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act) that may be needed to determine your incapacity (see HIPAA release form at Appendix 23);
- Specific and detailed information and authorizations needed to close your law practice;
- Steps to be taken to assure that your written instructions are updated and reviewed periodically for completeness and accuracy.

See “Checklist for Lawyers Planning to Protect Clients’ Interests in the Event of the Lawyer’s Death, Disability, Impairment or Incapacity” and “Checklist for Closing Your Own Office,” set forth as Appendices 2A-2G. See also Appendix 8, a form that lists your Law Office contacts, which should be kept up to date and given to your family, staff, and/or Assisting Attorney.

STEP 3: Discuss your Advance Exit Plan with the appropriate persons (e.g., your family, designated Assisting Attorney, nominated executor, and key office staff) to avoid confusion or delay in the event of your disability, incapacity, retirement or death. For example, your executor should be aware of your wishes with respect to your practice in the event of death, including any instructions you may have given to an Assisting Attorney. Not only will this protect your practice, it will also save considerable time and expense that may be incurred in the administration of your estate. Appendices 8 and 9 provide you with a checklist for your executor, and a sample provision that can be used in your will giving instructions to your executor regarding your law practice.

STEP 4: Your Advance Exit Plan should describe arrangements you enter into with your designated Assisting Attorney (see Appendices 3, 4, and 5, which are sample forms that could be used to accomplish this objective). They should cover the following:
• Authorization to obtain medical information to assist the Assisting Attorney (or other designated person, e.g., family member) in determining your incapacity to continue in practice (see HIPAA release form at Appendix 23);

• Authorization to provide all relevant people with notice of closure of your law practice;

• Authorization to your Assisting Attorney to contact your clients for instructions on transferring their files;

• Authorization to obtain extensions of time in litigation matters, where needed.

Your Advance Exit Plan might also include sample letters notifying clients of your inability to continue in practice, and arranging for transfer or return of files. See “Letter Advising That Lawyer Is Unable to Continue in Practice” (Appendix 7B) and “Authorization for Transfer of Client File,” “Request for File,” and “Acknowledgment of Receipt for File” (Appendices 7D, 7E, and 7F).

At Appendix 17, you will find a helpful list of questions and answers on the subject of file retention and preservation, providing you with guidance on file disposition. If you are retiring, you should prepare a letter to your clients advising them of your retirement, the need to obtain new counsel, and a procedure for transfer of their files. See “Letter from Planning Attorney Advising that Lawyer Is Closing Office” (Appendix 7A). If there are other attorneys in your firm who would be available to represent the clients in the event of your own inability to practice, your Advance Exit Plan should include a letter from your colleague(s) to your clients advising them of your disability and their availability to continue handling their matter (see Appendix 7B).

Your Advance Exit Plan also should include instructions as to:

• Disposition of closed files;

• Disposition of your office furnishings and equipment;

• Authorization to draw checks on your office and trust accounts;

• Payment of current liabilities of the office;

• Billing fees on open files;

• Collecting accounts receivable;

• Access to important information (e.g., passwords to your computer); and

• Insurance matters.

Your Advance Exit Plan also might include provisions that give your Assisting Attorney or executor, as the case may be, authority to:

• Wind down your business financial affairs;

• Provide your clients with a final accounting and statement of work done by you/your office;

• Collect fees on your behalf;

• Liquidate or sell your practice. (See Appendices 3, 4, and 5 for sample language authorizing the foregoing):
• Act on behalf of your PC or your PLLC in the event of your death or disability. (See Appendix 6 for sample “Waiver of Notice of Special Joint Meeting of the Sole Shareholder and Sole Director of Corp.” and “Minutes of the Special Joint Meeting of the Sole Shareholder and Sole Director of Corp.”)

Compensation to Your Assisting Attorney and Staff

Your Advance Exit Plan should include an arrangement for payment by you or your estate to your Assisting Attorney and staff for services rendered on your behalf in closing, temporarily managing until your return, or managing your practice pending its sale. For example, the agreement with your Assisting Attorney may provide for compensation based on an hourly rate, for reimbursement of reasonably necessary expenses, and for billing on a monthly basis.

You also should address the issue of how to fund this compensation to your Assisting Attorney and support staff. You can direct that payment be made from your office receipts. If you are concerned that your law practice income will be insufficient to defray this expense, you may want to consider disability insurance in an amount sufficient to cover this potential liability. Business Overhead Expense Insurance is a variation on Disability Income Insurance that specifically covers the ongoing expenses of running your office (including non-lawyer staff salaries, rent, equipment leasing, etc.), in the event of your disability.

In the case of death, since your estate will be responsible for payment to the Assisting Attorney, your executor or other personal representative should be notified in advance of any arrangements you may have made with regard to this issue. You may want to consider including those instructions in your will, especially if you have not made such arrangements in a separate written agreement. As in the case of disability or incapacity, since your practice may be your only probate asset and insufficient to cover the cost of compensation to the Assisting Attorney and disbursements incurred in closing your practice, you may want to consider purchasing an insurance policy naming the estate as beneficiary and specify in your will that the proceeds from the policy be used for this purpose.

Conflicts of Interest and Confidentiality

Although the designation of an Assisting Attorney to assume responsibility for client files raises issues of client confidentiality, it is reasonable to read the Rules of Professional Conduct as authorizing such access and disclosure under these circumstances. (RPC 1.6, RPC 1.17, RPC 1.18). Remember that if an Assisting Attorney discovers evidence of legal malpractice or ethical violations, he or she may have an ethical obligation to take appropriate action. (See “What If? Answers to Frequently Asked Questions” set forth in Appendix 1).

Your Assisting Attorney also must be aware of conflict of interest issues and do a conflicts check if he or she is either providing legal services to your clients or reviewing confidential file information to assist with referral of your clients’ files. Your Assisting Attorney should be prepared to delegate to another attorney those files with which he or she has a conflict of interest, while being careful to protect materials and information that may be subject to attorney-client privilege or duty of confidentiality (See Appendix 1).

Trust Accounts

If you do not make arrangements to allow another attorney access to your attorney trust account, your clients’ money must remain in trust until a court authorizes access. This is likely to cause delay and put your clients and you in a difficult position if you are unable to conduct your practice. On the other hand, allowing access to your trust account is a serious matter. If you give access to your trust account to another attorney and that lawyer misappropriates money, then your clients will suffer, and you may be held responsible. There is no simple answer to this dilemma and other important decisions which you must make regarding your trust account (See Appendix 1).

First, you must decide whether to appoint a co-signatory prior to your disability, or to grant access to the account at a specified future time or event. If you decide to allow access to your trust account by your Assisting Attorney all of the time, then you can authorize the attorney as a signer on your accounts and contact the bank to sign all appropriate cards and paperwork. This allows easy access on the part of your Assisting Attorney if, for example, you are unexpectedly delayed on a trip. However, it opens the door to a host of other risks, as you are unable to control the signer’s access. If you prefer not to have a co-signatory on your trust account while you are able to conduct your practice, you may nevertheless plan in advance and give such authority in the future. One option is to give your Assisting Attorney a power of attorney that takes effect upon your disability and includes as a power the authority to withdraw funds from your trust account. You may want to leave the executed power of attorney with a third party whom you trust to ensure that it will not be released until the specified event, e.g., disability, occurs.

Another option is to give your Assisting Attorney access to your trust account in an agreement or consent and authorization form. (See Appendices 3, 4, and 5). Again, the power may be conditioned upon the occurrence of a specified event. However, unlike a power of attorney, which ceases upon death, the agreement can authorize your Assisting Attorney to operate your trust account upon and after your death. In such case, this power may be used by your Assisting Attorney in winding up your practice.

Whichever method you choose, remember to check with the bank that holds your trust account to ensure that your power of attorney or agreement is acceptable to it and to sign additional documents that may be required. New York Rules of Professional Conduct have detailed procedures which should be reviewed carefully by you and your Assisting Attorney to ensure that the appropriate steps are taken to safeguard all trust funds and to have the funds delivered to the appropriate parties on a timely basis. (See RPC 1.16(e), RPC 1.15 and NYSBA publication Attorney Escrow Accounts, Rules, Regulation and Related Topics, 4th Ed.).

Include Family and Staff

Your Advance Exit Plan also should include written letters of instruction to your family and office staff. In the event of death, these letters should ease the administration of your estate by describing what you have, where it is located, how to access it, and what to do with it. Your family, your executor (in the event of death), your designated Assisting Attorney and your office staff need to share information and coordinate their activities in the event of your disability, incapacity or death. Care should be taken to safeguard against improper access to client files and information by unauthorized persons, e.g., non-attorney family members. Generally, these instructions should cover the following:

- All pertinent personal and family information and financial information;
- Identification and location of all estate planning documents, including original wills/trusts;
- Location of personal and business insurance records, among other things.
Guidance to your staff should include directions as to:

- Notifying your professional liability carrier;
- Notifying all courts, tribunals, boards and administrative agencies where your matters are pending;
- Closing your office;
- Reviewing all depositories, including trust accounts and safe contents;
- Coordinating with your accountant.

In effect, you must create a system for the orderly winding up of your law practice and the settlement of your own estate. See “Checklist for the Fiduciary of a Solo Practitioner” (Appendix 2F); “Law Firm Master List of Contacts and Important Information” (Appendix 8); and “Special Provisions for Attorney’s Will Regarding My Law Practice” (Appendix 9).

Other Steps

There are other steps that you can take while you are in practice to make the closing of your office relatively smooth, timely and cost efficient in the event of disability, incapacity, retirement or death. These steps include:

- Making sure that your office procedures manual explains how to produce a list of client names and addresses for open files;
- Keeping a calendaring system with all deadlines and follow-up dates;
- Thoroughly documenting client files;
- Keeping your time and billing records up to date;
- Familiarizing your Assisting Attorney with your office systems;
- Reviewing and updating on a regular basis your written agreement with your Assisting Attorney;
- Periodically purging old and closed files (see Appendix 17);
- Periodically communicating with clients for whom wills or other original documents are held by your firm to confirm that addresses are up to date and what documents are still relevant.

If your office is organized and in good order, your designated Assisting Attorney will be able to manage, close or wind down your law practice in a timely and cost efficient manner. It also will make your law office a more valuable asset that may be sold and the proceeds remitted to you or your estate.

Special Considerations in the Event of Death

In the event of your death, your practice will be an asset of your estate. Your personal representative, be it executor or administrator, is the person ultimately responsible for the administration of this asset, including ensuring that all obligations to clients are met.
If you have designated an Assisting Attorney prior to your death, you should notify your personal representative of the appointment and review your Advance Exit Plan with him or her. This will avoid confusion and enable your personal representative to promptly, upon the award of letters testamentary or administration, authorize your Assisting Attorney to embark upon his or her duties. You may wish to include in your will a direction to your executor that authorizes and requests delegation of responsibilities relating to the administration and closing of your practice to your Assisting Attorney and refers, specifically, to the Advance Exit Plan, if appropriate.

If you have not designated an Assisting Attorney in advance of your death, your executor may appoint an attorney to manage and close (or assist in selling) your practice. You may want to include language in your will that provides guidelines to your executor and any attorneys that your executor may retain regarding the management or closing of your practice. For example, you may want to name specific attorneys to take over certain of your files and enumerate powers to close your practice similar to those set forth in an Advance Exit Plan. If your nominated executor is not an attorney, it is important that he or she avoid inappropriate access to client files and information and rely instead on an attorney or office staff to attend to these matters. (See “Special Provisions for Attorney’s Will” (Appendix 9) and “Checklist for the Fiduciary of a Solo Practitioner” (Appendix 2F)).

Whether or not you have an Advance Exit Plan, it is critical that you have a current will so that management and closing or transfer of your law practice can be addressed without delay and attendant harm to clients.

You also should consider a source of funding to compensate your designated Assisting Attorney, office staff, or attorney and staff retained by your executor who will be working during this transition period. Since your practice may be your principal probate asset and your operating account may not have sufficient funds for this purpose, you may want to consider an insurance policy as a source of funding to defray this expense. The beneficiary of the policy could be the estate, with specific instructions in your will that proceeds be used for this purpose.

Sale of a Law Practice

Your practice also may be an asset that can be sold to benefit you and/or your family or estate if you are no longer able to practice. Taking the appropriate steps as outlined above will not only protect your clients, but also may be necessary to preserve the value of your practice so that it may be transferred to another attorney or firm. Included in these materials are guidelines for the transfer of a practice (including an overview of RPC 1.17), detailed suggestions for structuring such a sale, and a sample agreement and forms that would be relevant if your practice is sold. (See “Transfer of a Law Practice” (Appendix 10); “Valuing a Law Practice” (Appendix 11); “Sample Asset Purchase Agreement” (Appendix 12); and “Confidentiality and Non-Disclosure Agreement” (Appendix 13)). The Confidentiality Agreement would be signed before a prospective seller provides the prospective buyer with confidential client information and other confidential information about the seller’s practice, such as financial information.

Information for the Attorney Who Has Been Designated as a Successor, Caretaker or Closer of a Law Practice

The Assisting Attorney designated to manage or close another attorney’s office will face myriad responsibilities, some of which will require immediate action. Where a detailed plan is in place (as described in these guidelines), the job of the Assisting Attorney will be easier. If no such plan is in place, the “Checklist for Closing Another Attorney’s Office” (Appendix 2C) and the checklists for concerns when assuming responsibilities of another attorney’s practice (Appendices 2D and 2E), and the sample letters and forms regarding notification to clients and transfer of files (Appendices 7A to 7F) will be helpful to you. The checklists at Appendices 2A and 2B also may be useful for the Planning Attorney to review prior to designing his or her own Advance Exit Plan and to ensure that the issues raised in those checklists are dealt with in the plan the attorney develops.

Other Considerations

You will find in the Guide suggestions relating to file destruction or retention (Appendix 17). The Guide also provides information on how to provide for practice continuity issues when the law practice of a partner or associate becomes interrupted because of issues related to his or her alcoholism, drug addiction or other impairment. A firm must be aware of the principal employment and disability laws involved, as well as the resources available to members of the firm in their efforts to assist their colleague (Appendices 14, 15, and 16).

Should a law office suffer a complete failure due to unforeseen disaster, a suggested checklist and plan is included to help in planning for orderly transition and resumption of practice (Appendix 2G).

The Guide sets forth the relevant statutes, rules of professional conduct, and ethics opinions relevant to advanced planning issues (Appendices 18, 19, 20, and 21).

Finally, the Guide reproduces an article (also included in the original Planning Ahead Guide) by David Kee, a Maine attorney, listing the “do’s” and “don’ts” of retirement (Appendix 22).

Start Now

We encourage you to develop and implement an Advance Exit Plan utilizing the basic guidelines discussed above. You can accomplish this now, at little or no expense, to protect your clients’ and your own interests. Don’t put it off – start the process today and keep it current and complete.

NOTE: The Planning Ahead Guide was originally written by the New York State Bar Association’s Special Committee on Law Practice Continuity, which gratefully acknowledged the use of “Planning Ahead: Protecting Your Client’s Interest in the Event of Your Disability or Death,” published by the Ethics Department of the Virginia State Bar, as well as “Planning Ahead: A Guide to Protecting Your Clients’ Interest in the Event of Your Disability or Death” by Barbara S. Fishleder, published by the Oregon State Bar Professional Liability Fund. The Guide and its model forms have now been revised and updated by the NYSBA Committee on Law Practice Management.
APPENDIX 1

WHAT IF?
ANSWERS TO FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT CLOSING A LAW PRACTICE ON A TEMPORARY OR PERMANENT BASIS

If you are planning to close your office or if you are considering helping a friend or colleague close his or her practice, there are numerous issues to resolve. How you structure your agreement will determine what the Assisting Attorney must do if the Assisting Attorney finds (1) errors in the files, such as missed time limitations; (2) errors in the Planning Attorney’s trust account; or (3) defalcations of client funds.

Discussing these issues at the beginning of the relationship with your friend or colleague will help to avoid misunderstandings later when the Assisting Attorney interacts with the Planning Attorney’s former clients. If these issues are not discussed, the Planning Attorney and the Assisting Attorney may be surprised to find that the Assisting Attorney (1) has an obligation to inform the Planning Attorney’s clients about a potential malpractice claim or (2) that the Assisting Attorney may be required to report the Planning Attorney to the Disciplinary Committee (RPC 8.3. See also NYSBA Ethics Opinions 531, 734, 854).

The best way to avoid these problems is for the Planning Attorney and the Assisting Attorney to have a written agreement, and, when applicable, for the Assisting Attorney to have a written agreement with the Planning Attorney’s former clients. If there is no written agreement clarifying the obligations and relationships or plainly limiting the scope of the Assisting Attorney’s role, an Assisting Attorney may find that the Planning Attorney believes that the Assisting Attorney is representing the Planning Attorney’s interests. At the same time, the former clients of the Planning Attorney may also believe that the Assisting Attorney is representing their interests. It is important to keep in mind that an attorney-client relationship can sometimes be established by the reasonable belief of a would-be client. (RPC 1.7, 1.8, and 1.9).

This section reviews some of these issues and the various arrangements that the Planning Attorney and the Assisting Attorney can make. All of these frequently asked questions, except #9, are presented as if the Assisting Attorney is posing the questions.

1. Must I notify the former clients of the Planning Attorney if I discover a potential malpractice claim against the Planning Attorney?

   The answer is largely determined by the agreement that you have with the Planning Attorney and the Planning Attorney’s former clients. If you do not have an attorney-client relationship with the Planning Attorney, and you are the new lawyer for the Planning Attorney’s former clients, you must inform your client (the Planning Attorney’s former client) of the error, and advise the client of the option of submitting a claim to the professional malpractice insurance carrier of the Planning Attorney, unless the scope of your representation of the client excludes actions against the Planning Attorney. If you want to limit the scope of your representation, do so in writing and advise your clients to get independent advice on the issues.

   If you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer, and not the lawyer for his or her former clients, you should discuss the error with the Planning Attorney and advise the Planning Attorney of the obligation to inform the client of the error. (RPC 1.4(a)). If you are the attorney for the Planning Attorney, you would not be obligated to inform the Planning Attorney’s client of the error. You would, however, want to be careful not to make any misrepresentations. (RPC 4.1, 8.4(c)). For example, if the Planning Attorney had previously told the client a complaint had been filed, and the complaint had not been filed, you should not reaffirm the misrepresentation and you might well have a duty to correct it under some circumstances. In any case, you or the Planning Attorney should notify the Planning Attorney’s malpractice insurance carrier as soon as you become aware of any circumstance, error or omission that may be a potential malpractice claim in order to prevent denial of coverage under the policy due to the “late notice” provision.

If you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer, an alternative arrangement that you can make with the Planning Attorney is to agree that you may inform the Planning Attorney’s former clients of any malpractice errors. This would not be permission to represent the former clients on malpractice actions against the Planning Attorney. It would authorize you to inform the Planning Attorney’s former clients that a potential error exists and that they should seek independent counsel.

2. I know sensitive information about the Planning Attorney. The Planning Attorney’s former client is asking questions. What information can I give the Planning Attorney’s former client?

Again, the answer is based on your relationship with the Planning Attorney and the Planning Attorney’s clients. If you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer, you would be limited to disclosing any information that the Planning Attorney wished you to disclose. You would, however, want to make clear to the Planning Attorney’s clients that you do not represent them and that they should seek independent counsel, as well as that you are not able or permitted to answer all of their questions. If the Planning Attorney suffered from a condition of a sensitive nature and did not want you to disclose this information to the client, you could not do so.

3. Since the Planning Attorney is no longer practicing law, does the Planning Attorney have malpractice coverage?

This depends on the type of coverage the Planning Attorney had. Lawyer professional liability policies are “claims made” policies. As a result, as a general rule, if the policy period has terminated, there is no coverage. However, most malpractice policies include a short automatic extended reporting period of usually 60 days after the termination date of the policy. This provides the opportunity to report known or potential malpractice claims when a policy ends and will not be renewed. In addition, most malpractice policies provide options to purchase an extended reporting period endorsement for longer periods of time. These extended reporting period endorsements do not provide ongoing coverage for new errors, but they do provide the opportunity to lock in coverage under the expiring policy for errors that surface after the end of the policy, but within the extended reporting endorsement time frame. See Appendix 24 for further information.

4. What protection will I have under the Planning Attorney’s malpractice insurance coverage, if I participate in the closing or sale of the office?

You must check the definition of “Insured” in the malpractice policy form. Most policies define “Insured” as both the firm and the individual lawyers employed by or affiliated with the firm. This typically is broadened to include past employees and “of counsel” attorneys. In addition, most lawyers’ professional liability policies specifically provide coverage for the “estate, heirs, executors, trustees in bankruptcy and legal representatives” of the Insured, as additional insureds under the policy.
5. In addition to transferring files and helping to close the Planning Attorney’s practice, I want to represent the Planning Attorney’s former clients. Am I permitted to do so?

Whether you are permitted to represent the former clients of the Planning Attorney depends on (1) if the clients want you to represent them and (2) whom else you represent.

If you are representing the Planning Attorney, you are unable to represent the Planning Attorney’s former clients on any matter against the Planning Attorney. This would include representing the Planning Attorney’s former client on a malpractice claim, ethics complaint, or fee claim against the Planning Attorney. If you do not represent the Planning Attorney, you are limited by conflicts arising from your other cases and clients. You must check your client list for possible client conflicts before undergoing representation or reviewing confidential information of a former client of the Planning Attorney. (RPC 1.7, 1.8 and 1.9).

Even if a conflict check reveals that you are permitted to represent the client, you may prefer to refer the case. A referral is advisable if the matter is outside your area of expertise, or if you do not have adequate time or staff to handle the case. If you intend to participate in a referral fee, the requirements of RPC 1.5(g) must be met. In addition, if the Planning Attorney is a friend, bringing a legal malpractice claim or fee claim against him or her may make you vulnerable to the allegation that you didn’t zealously advocate on behalf of your new client. To avoid this potential exposure, you should provide the client with names of other attorneys, or refer the client to the New York State Bar Association’s Lawyer Referral Service (telephone number 1-800-342-3661) or other appropriate lawyer referral service.

6. What procedures should I follow for distributing the funds that are in the Planning Attorney’s escrow account?

If your review of the Planning Attorney’s escrow account indicates that there may be conflicting claims to the funds in the account, you should initiate a procedure for distributing the existing funds, such as a court-directed interpleader, pursuant to CPLR 1006.

If the client cannot be located, a judicial order may be sought seeking to fix the Planning Attorney’s fee and disbursements, and deposit the missing client’s share with the Lawyer’s Fund for Client Protection. (RPC 1.15(f)). As a matter of public policy, the Lawyer’s Fund will accept deposits in sums of less than $1,000, without a formal application and court order.

7. If there was a serious ethical violation, must I tell the Planning Attorney’s former clients?

The answer depends on the relationships. The answer is (A) no, if you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer; (B) maybe, if you are not representing the Planning Attorney or the Planning Attorney’s former clients; and (C) maybe, if you are the attorney for the Planning Attorney’s former clients.

(A) If you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer, you are not obligated to inform the Planning Attorney’s former clients of any ethical violations or report any of the Planning Attorney’s ethical violations to the disciplinary committee if your knowledge of the misconduct is a confidence or secret of your client, the Planning Attorney. (RPC 8.3, RPC 1.6). Although you may have no duty to report, you may have other responsibilities. For example, if you discover that some of the client funds are not in the Planning Attorney’s escrow account as they should be, you, as the attorney for the Planning Attorney, should discuss this matter with the Planning Attorney, and encourage the Planning Attorney to correct the shortfall.
If you are the attorney for the Planning Attorney, and the Planning Attorney is deceased, you should contact the personal representative of the estate. Remember that your confidentiality obligations continue even though your client is deceased. If the Planning Attorney is alive but unable to function, you may notify the Planning Attorney’s clients of the Planning Attorney’s situation and suggest that they seek independent legal advice.

If you are the Planning Attorney’s lawyer, you should make certain that clients of the Planning Attorney do not perceive you as their attorney. This should include informing them in writing that you do not represent them.

(B) If you are not the attorney for the Planning Attorney, and you are not representing any of the former clients of the Planning Attorney, you may still have a fiduciary obligation (as an authorized signer on the escrow account) to notify the clients of the shortfall, and you may have an obligation under RPC 8.3 to report the Planning Attorney to the Disciplinary Committee. You should also report any notice of a potential claim to the Planning Attorney’s malpractice insurance carrier in order to preserve coverage under the Planning Attorney’s malpractice insurance policy.

If you are the attorney for a former client of the Planning Attorney, you have an obligation to inform the client about the shortfall and advise the client of available remedies such as pursuing the Planning Attorney for the shortfall and filing claims or complaints with the Lawyers’ Fund for Client Protection, 119 Washington Ave., Albany, NY 12210 (telephone number 1-800-442-3863); the malpractice insurance carrier; and the Disciplinary or Grievance Committee. If you are a friend of the Planning Attorney, this is a particularly important issue. You should determine ahead of time whether you are prepared to assume the obligation to inform the Planning Attorney’s former clients of the Planning Attorney’s ethical violations. If you do not want to inform your clients about possible ethics violations, you must explain to your clients (the former clients of Planning Attorney) that you are not providing the clients with any advice about ethics violations of the Planning Attorney. You should advise the clients in writing to seek independent representation on these issues. Limiting the scope of your representation, however, does not eliminate your duty to report pursuant to Rule 8.3.

As a general rule, whether you have an obligation to disclose a mistake to a client will depend on the nature of the Planning Attorney’s possible error or omission, whether it is possible to correct it in the pending proceeding, the extent of the harm from the possible error or omission, and the likelihood that the Planning Attorney’s conduct would be deemed so deficient as to give rise to a malpractice claim. Ordinarily, since lawyers have an obligation to keep their clients informed and to provide information that their clients need to make decisions relating to the representation, you would have an obligation to disclose to the client the possibility that the Planning Attorney has made a significant error or omission.

8. If the Planning Attorney stole client funds, do I have exposure to an ethics complaint against me?

You do not have exposure to an ethics complaint for stealing the money, unless in some way you aided or abetted the Planning Attorney in the unethical conduct. Whether you have an obligation to inform the Planning Attorney’s former clients of the defalcation depends on your relationship with the Planning Attorney and with the Planning Attorney’s former clients. (See #7 above.)
If you are the new attorney for a former client of the Planning Attorney, and you fail to advise the client of the Planning Attorney’s ethical violations, you may be exposed to the allegation that you have violated your ethical responsibilities to your new client.

9. What are the pros and cons of allowing someone to have access to my escrow account?
   How do I make arrangements to give my Assisting Attorney access?

   The most important “pro” of authorizing someone to sign on your trust account is the convenience it provides for your clients. If you suddenly become unavailable or unable to continue your practice, an Assisting Attorney is able to transfer money from your trust account to pay appropriate fees, disbursements and costs, to provide your clients with settlement checks, and to refund unearned fees. If these arrangements are not made, the clients’ money must remain in the trust account, until a court allows access. This court order may be through a guardianship proceeding, or an order for a court-directed interpleader, pursuant to CPLR 1006. This delay may leave your clients at a disadvantage, since settlement funds, or unearned fees held in trust, may be needed by them to hire a new lawyer.

   On the other hand, the most important “con” of authorizing access is your inability to control the person who has been granted access. Since serving as an authorized signer gives the Assisting Attorney the ability to write trust account checks, withdraw funds, or close the account, he or she can do so at any time, even if you are not disabled, incapacitated, or for some other reason unable to conduct your business affairs, or dead. It is very important to carefully choose the person you authorize as a signer, and when possible, to continue monitoring your accounts.

   If you decide to allow your Assisting Attorney to be an authorized signer, you must decide if you want to give the Assisting Attorney (1) access only during a specific time period or when a specific event occurs (e.g., incapacity) or (2) access all the time.

10. The Planning Attorney wants to authorize me as an escrow account signer. Am I permitted also to be the attorney for the Planning Attorney?

   Not if there is a conflict of interest. As an authorized signer on the Planning Attorney’s escrow account, you would have a duty to properly account for the funds belonging to the former clients of the Planning Attorney. This duty could conflict with your duty to the Planning Attorney if (1) you were hired to represent him or her on issues related to the closure of his or her law practice and (2) there were defalcations in the escrow account. Because of this potential conflict, it is probably best to choose to be an authorized signer OR to represent the Planning Attorney on issues related to the closure of his or her practice, but not both. (See #4 above.)
APPENDIX 2A

CHECKLIST FOR LAWYERS PLANNING TO PROTECT CLIENTS’ INTERESTS IN THE EVENT OF THE LAWYER’S DISABILITY, IMPAIRMENT, INCAPACITY OR DEATH

1. Consider using retainer agreements with your clients that state that you have arranged for an Assisting Attorney to manage or close your practice in the event of your death, your temporary or permanent disability, impairment or incapacity, and identifying such attorney. Be sure to keep his/her identity current with your clients.

2. Have a thorough and up-to-date office procedure manual that includes information on:
   a. How to check for conflicts of interest;
   b. How to use the calendaring system;
   c. How to generate and maintain a current list of active client files, including client names, addresses, and phone numbers and email addresses;
   d. Where client ledgers are kept and if locked how to obtain access to them;
   e. How the open/active files are organized;
   f. How the closed files are organized and their assigned numbers;
   g. Where the closed files are kept and how to access them;
   h. The office policy on keeping original documents of clients and how to access them;
   i. Where original client documents are kept and how to access them;
   j. Where the safe deposit box is located, its number, and how to access it;
   k. The bank name, address, account signers, and account numbers for all law office bank accounts;
   l. The location of all law office bank account records (trust and general);
   m. Where to find, or who knows about, the computer passwords;
   n. How to access your voice mail (or answering machine) and the access code numbers;
   o. Business and personal insurance policies with contact information for brokers and insurance companies;
   p. How to access all current and past employee service personnel, provider and facility and equipment records.

3. Make sure all your file deadlines (including follow-up deadlines) are on your calendaring system.

4. Document your files. (Keep a master list of files, past and present. File documents in appropriate files.)

5. Keep your time and billing records up to date.
6. Have a written agreement and/or power of attorney with an attorney who will manage or close your practice (the “Assisting Attorney”) that outlines the responsibilities delegated to the Assisting Attorney who will be managing or closing your practice. Include a procedure to enable your Assisting Attorney to determine whether your incapacity renders you unable to practice law, and complete, in advance, a medical release and authorization form as required by HIPAA permitting disclosure of medical information to assist in this determination. (See HIPAA release form at Appendix 23). Determine whether the Assisting Attorney also will be your personal attorney. Choose an Assisting Attorney who is sensitive to conflict of interest issues.

7. If your written agreement authorizes the Assisting Attorney to sign trust or general account checks, follow the procedures required by your local bank. Decide whether you want to authorize access at all times, at specific times, or only upon the happening of a specific event. In some instances, you and the Assisting Attorney will be required to sign bank forms authorizing the Assisting Attorney to have access to your trust or general account. Choose your Assisting Attorney wisely for he or she may have access to your clients’ funds.

8. Familiarize your Assisting Attorney with your office systems and keep him or her apprised of office changes.

9. Introduce your Assisting Attorney to your office staff. Make certain your staff knows where you keep the written agreement with your Assisting Attorney and how to contact the Assisting Attorney if an emergency occurs before or after office hours. If you practice without a regular staff, make sure your Assisting Attorney knows whom to contact (the landlord, for example) to gain access to your office.

10. Inform your spouse or closest living relative and your named executor of the existence of this agreement and how to contact the Assisting Attorney.

11. Renew your written agreement with your Assisting Attorney each year. If you include the name of your Assisting Attorney in your retainer agreement, make sure the information concerning that attorney is current.
APPENDIX 2B

CHECKLIST FOR CLOSING YOUR OWN OFFICE

1. Finalize as many active files as possible.

2. Write to clients with active files, advising them that you are unable to continue representing them and that they need to retain new counsel. Your letter should inform them about time limitations and time frames important to their matters. The letter should explain how and where they can pick up copies of their files and should give a deadline for doing so. (See “Letter from Planning Attorney Advising That Lawyer Is Closing Law Office,” provided in Appendix 7A).

3. For cases that have pending court dates, depositions or hearings, discuss with affected clients how to proceed. Where appropriate, request extensions, continuances and the rescheduling of hearing dates. Send written confirmations of these extensions, continuances and rescheduled dates to opposing counsel and to your client.

4. For cases before administrative bodies and courts, obtain clients’ permission to submit motions and orders to withdraw as counsel of record. Review Rule 1.16.

5. In cases where the client is obtaining a new attorney, be certain that a Substitution of Attorney is filed.

6. Select an appropriate date and check to see if all matters have a motion and order allowing your withdrawal as counsel of record or a Substitution of Attorney filed with the court.

7. Make copies of files for clients and yourself. All clients should either pick up their files (and sign a receipt acknowledging that they have received them) or sign an authorization for you to release their files to their new attorneys. (See Authorization for Transfer of Client File and Acknowledgement of Receipt of File, provided in Appendices 7D and 7F).

8. Write to all clients for whom you have retained original wills, advising them that you are closing your office and request that they pick up their original will. Ask them to sign a receipt and maintain a record of all wills that are retrieved. Advise them of consequences of failure to comply. (See “FAQs re Document Destruction and Preservation,” Appendix 17).

9. Tell all clients that they can pick up their closed files or where they will be stored and whom they should contact in order to retrieve them. Obtain all clients’ permission to destroy their files after approximately seven years (See Appendix 17). If a closed file is to be stored by another attorney, obtain the client’s permission to allow the attorney to store the file for you and provide the client with the attorney’s name, address, and phone number.

10. If you have sold your practice, you will have already advised your clients of your prior intent to do so, but advise them also of your having completed the transaction, the location of their files in the event some clients have declined to retain the successor attorney and have not collected or released their files, and readvise your clients of the name, address and phone number of the purchasing attorney.
11. If you are a sole practitioner, arrange to have your calls forwarded to you or another person who can assist your clients. This eliminates the problem created when clients call your phone number, get a recording stating that the number is disconnected, and do not know where else to turn for information.

12. Maintain a complete and up-to-date employee file, including resumes, employment agreements, payroll and tax records and other significant documents. (See Appendix 8).

13. Identify all outside service personnel and providers by name, address, phone and fax numbers, and email addresses. (See Appendix 8).

14. Maintain a complete record of all current and past facility and equipment records, including deeds, mortgages, leases and related materials. (See Appendix 8).

15. If possible, provide sufficient advance written notice of the closure for your practice so as to provide clients with reasonable and sufficient time to make other arrangements.
APPENDIX 2C

CHECKLIST FOR CLOSING ANOTHER ATTORNEY’S OFFICE

This is a checklist for an attorney who is closing another attorney’s practice. The reason that the attorney is closing his or her practice will affect how you proceed. For example, if the attorney is disabled or deceased, you may need to make decisions without the attorney’s assistance. To the extent that the attorney and his or her staff are available, you should make every effort to seek their assistance. If you are closing an attorney’s practice and selling it to another attorney, please refer to Appendix 2E.

Costs involved in closing for another attorney’s practice can be significant. Be prepared and be careful about who is responsible for these expenses.

The term “Affected Attorney” refers to the attorney whose office is being closed and whose practice is being terminated. “Closing Attorney” refers to the attorney who is closing the Affected Attorney’s practice.

1. Check the calendar and active files to determine which items are urgent. If possible, discuss with the Affected Attorney the status of open files. If the attorney has died or is otherwise unavailable, contact the secretary, paralegal or other assistants who worked with the Affected Attorney. Staff members often have relationships with the clients and a great deal of helpful information. If possible, retain and compensate the staff while you are closing the Affected Attorney’s practice.

2. On cases in suit, expect a full and active litigation calendar awaiting compliance. Immediately review upcoming trial dates and note of issue filing deadlines, scheduled court dates, appearances, depositions, motion return dates and filing dates for briefs, pleadings and discovery responses. Obtain a run of the calendar for the next six months. Expect that some active and upcoming dates may not be docketed on the calendar. Discover these by reviewing each case file, and communicating with opposing counsel or the court. In civil litigation, many cases are governed by a judicial preliminary conference order which directs that each phase of a case occur by a certain date. Check the preliminary conference order in every case. If extensions are needed on the preliminary conference scheduling order, seek extensions in writing well before close of the discovery period. Determine what can be adjourned and what needs to be dealt with. Courts and opposing counsel are generally cooperative about adjourning matters when disability strikes, but need as much advance notice as possible.

3. Contact clients for matters that are urgent or immediately scheduled for hearing or court appearances, or discovery. Obtain permission to postpone or reschedule. (See CPLR 321(c)). Talk to clients about retaining new counsel to take over responsibility for their matters.

4. Contact courts and opposing counsel about files that require immediate discovery or court appearances. Reschedule hearings or obtain extensions where necessary. Confirm extensions and adjournments in writing.
5. For transactional matters, check the underlying contract for deadlines in which to send notices, to take actions or to close the transaction and identify funds that are held in escrow. Confirm material terms with clients and, if prudence requires, with the counter-party’s attorney.

6. Immediately determine who is responsible for the IOLA and attorney escrow accounts. If there is another signatory on the account, contact that attorney immediately. Obtain written instructions from clients and third parties concerning funds in the IOLA and trust accounts. If the escrow accounts do not appear to be in order, you may need to arrange for an audit of the accounts to determine whether there are adequate funds to meet escrow obligations before disbursing the funds on deposit in the accounts.

7. Promptly address open litigation matters. Check the applicable statutes of limitations and procedural deadlines in each file. Statutes of limitations range from ninety-day notice of claim periods to six or nine months to three years for tort actions, and beyond. There are mandatory deadlines for perfecting appeals, filing tax forms, commencing Article 78 proceedings, seeking review of property tax assessments and nearly every judicial or administrative challenge. With respect to matters not within your areas of expertise, consult with other lawyers to determine the timeliness of issues referred to in the Affected Attorney’s files.

8. Open and review all unopened mail. Review all mail that is not filed and match it to the appropriate file.

9. Contact clients with active files and explain that the Affected Attorney’s law office is being closed and that you are handling the closing. Confirm this in writing. (See sample letters in Appendix 7A). Advise the clients to promptly retain new counsel and make arrangements to have their files returned to them or transferred to new counsel. Provide clients with a date by which they should pick up their files or send instructions to deliver the file to another attorney and describe the consequences of their failure to do so.

   You may recommend successor counsel to the client, including yourself. Transfers of files and changes of counsel often raise issues of fees owed to the Affected Attorney and must be dealt with at the time of transfer. For example, if a matter was being handled on a contingency fee basis, attempt to negotiate the Affected Attorney’s share of such fee with the attorney who is taking over the representation, before the file is transferred or the new attorney substituted as counsel. Similarly, if a matter was being handled on an hourly basis and there are outstanding fees owed to the Affected Attorney, payment should be obtained or secured, if possible, before the file is delivered to the client or transferred to new counsel. If satisfactory arrangements or agreement is not possible, you may need to file an application with a court. Charging and retaining liens may be asserted in appropriate cases, with some limitations.

10. For each case pending in court or before an administrative body, make sure that a Substitution of Counsel is served on the parties and filed with the court. If there is no Substitution of Counsel, you may have to make a motion to have the Affected Attorney relieved of representation of the client. Review RPC 1.16.

11. Notify the Affected Attorney’s accountant of your involvement in closing the Affected Attorney’s practice and seek assistance in reviewing financial records, including IOLA and escrow accounts. If the Affected Attorney acted as his or her own accountant and tax preparer, the Closing Attorney should retain an accountant to determine the financial status and tax liabilities of the Affected Attorney. The Closing Attorney should decide how financial accounting will be carried out during the period in which the Affected Attorney’s practice is being closed.

12. The general rule is that files belong to clients, not their attorneys. The exceptions to that rule are that lawyers’ notes are generally not the property of the client and a client whose bill is unpaid does not necessarily have a right to the file. If a client wants an original file, you should prepare and obtain a signed receipt for it. Review the content of each file before returning it to the client who has requested it. Decide whether you need to retain a copy of all or some portion of the file. Consider retaining documents for the benefit of the Affected Attorney so that the attorney or the estate can defend claims if necessary. Return all closed files to clients. Closed files that cannot be returned may be destroyed (i.e., shredded) if there are no original client documents or property contained in such files and efforts to reach the clients are unsuccessful and if the rules requiring retention of such files are complied with. Files that must be maintained because they cannot be returned or destroyed should be preserved and an authorized custodian should assume responsibility for such files.

Original wills and other original documents must be returned to clients and may not be destroyed or otherwise disposed of. In the case of original wills, if you are unable to locate the clients after a diligent search, you may file such wills with the Surrogate’s Court (be aware of filing fees) or deposit them with an appropriate depository (e.g., the appropriate county bar association) and notify the clients in writing, addressed to their last known address. Do NOT destroy them. (See “FAQs re Document Destruction and Preservation,” Appendix 17).

When returning files, make sure that you are returning them to the proper client. If a husband and wife executed wills years ago and the wife responds to your client inquiry letter by asking for the file, do not send back the husband’s will without his written authorization. The same rule applies to corporations, shareholders, business partners, etc. Seek court or ethics committee guidance where appropriate.

13. To locate clients for whom there are no current addresses, contact the postal service and other sources of information. If necessary, consider publication to advertise that the firm has closed. Be careful not to disclose confidential client information, including the existence of the attorney/client relationship, to third parties.

14. If the Affected Attorney whose practice is being closed was a sole practitioner, arrange for calls to his or her phone number to be forwarded to a new number. This eliminates the problem created when clients call the Affected Attorney’s phone number, get a recording stating that the number is disconnected and do not know where to turn for information. Even if the Closing Attorney has not agreed to take on this responsibility, there is often no other alternative available.

15. Prepare a final billing statement showing any outstanding fees due. Remit money received from clients for services rendered by the Affected Attorney to his or her estate or as directed by the Affected Attorney or personal representative. Review applicable retainer agreements and engagement letters. If there are fee disputes with clients, you may have to negotiate and settle outstanding fees owed to the Affected Attorney. Notify the Affected Attorney’s accountant to obtain a full understanding of the Affected Attorney’s accounting procedures.
16. If authorized, pay business expenses and liquidate or sell the practice. If the Affected Attorney has died, work with his or her fiduciary to resolve these matters.

17. Make arrangements through the Affected Attorney or his or her fiduciary to obtain reporting endorsement coverage on professional liability insurance for continuing professional liability coverage. Review other business insurance policies and determine which may be canceled and whether there is coverage in the event of the Affected Attorney’s disability or death.

18. Begin terminating all vendor and other contractual obligations of Affected Attorney, including lease obligations.
APPENDIX 2D

CHECKLIST OF CONCERNS WHEN ASSUMING TEMPORARY RESPONSIBILITY FOR ANOTHER ATTORNEY’S PRACTICE (DISABILITY OR SUSPENSION)

The term “Responsible Attorney” refers to the attorney who is assuming temporary responsibility for another attorney’s practice. The term “Affected Attorney” refers to the attorney who is disabled, temporarily or permanently, or who has been suspended, resigned or disbarred. If you are purchasing the Affected Attorney’s practice, please refer to Appendix 2E and RPC 1.17. The “Responsible Attorney” and the “Affected Attorney” should determine, in advance, whether the Affected Attorney’s law practice can or should be sold, either to the Responsible Attorney or to another attorney or law firm, and on what terms. While many law practices do not have a realizable value, some do and the Affected Attorney may be entitled to realize that value.

1. If possible, discuss with the Affected Attorney the status of open files—what has been completed, what has not, what has been billed, etc. The Affected Attorney may or may not be available to discuss individual matters. Often the Affected Attorney will know what matters require the most immediate attention, and will be able to prioritize his or her caseload to assist you in your caretaker responsibilities.

2. Consider who will be responsible for the overhead costs involved in managing the practice for the interim period. Address compensation of the Responsible Attorney.

3. Where the Responsible Attorney does not have the expertise in one or more of the areas in which the Affected Attorney practiced, the Responsible Attorney should enlist the assistance of other practitioners. The Responsible Attorney may seek such assistance through the court (if court-appointed) or through the bar association referral service.

4. Immediately determine who is responsible for and who is a signatory on the Affected Attorney’s IOLA and attorney escrow accounts. If there is a second signatory on the account, contact that attorney immediately. If there is no second signatory, you may assume responsibility for the accounts if they are in order. If the recordkeeping for the IOLA or escrow account is not adequate to determine who is entitled to the funds on deposit in such accounts or whether the accounts are fully funded, you may need to arrange for an audit of the accounts to determine whether there are adequate funds in the accounts for the clients and third parties entitled to receive such funds. You may consider alternatives to becoming a signatory on an account that is not fully reconciled and adequately funded. Seek ethics advice if necessary.

5. In assuming temporary responsibility for the Affected Attorney’s practice, consider and recognize the Affected Attorney’s “practice habits.” For example, if the attorney met with clients in their homes or places of business, or if the staff was actively involved in the attorney’s client relations, consider continuing in this same manner or advising the clients of your practices. Clearly advise clients of their right to seek new counsel of their own choosing. Give as much information as possible to clients as to the expected return of the Affected Attorney to active practice, if that is likely. Take great care to properly advise the clients in this regard. Inaccurate information given to the client may have an adverse impact on the client or the client’s case, as well as an adverse impact on the practice.

6. Consider whether to maintain the same fee arrangements if the Responsible Attorney is to render legal services to the Affected Attorney’s clients. If possible, determine in advance whether hourly rates or flat or staged fees will be used, and at what amounts. You may need new retainer agreements confirming the new arrangements, even if temporary. Disclosure of fee arrangements is required under the Rules of Professional Conduct (RPC 1.5) and perhaps advisable under the spirit of RPC 1.17, governing the sale of a law practice, although there is little direction in the Rules as to how fees are to be handled in these circumstances. If time and the Affected Attorney’s condition allow, the attorney should introduce the Responsible Attorney to non-lawyer staff members, referral sources such as insurance agents, bankers, realtors, and accountants with whom the attorney worked. If the Affected Attorney is not available to assist in this capacity, the Responsible Attorney may contact these people, not only for purposes of preserving client relations, but also to determine the location of any missing clients and, if needed, to facilitate the temporary operation of the Affected Attorney’s practice. Many clients work with a team of advisors and, with the client’s consent, the Responsible Attorney may have discussions with these other professionals.

7. Notify the Affected Attorney’s accountant. If the Affected Attorney did his or her own accounting and tax preparation, the Responsible Attorney’s accountant, with authorization, may assist in determining the tax and financial liabilities of the Affected Attorney. The Responsible Attorney should decide how financial records will be maintained during this temporary management of the practice of the Affected Attorney.

8. Review “vendor” relationships with the Affected Attorney’s vendors. Determine whether prepayments have been made for services and products that will not be used, and whether bills for storage of files, stationery, supplies, etc. must be paid.

9. Immediately address open litigation matters. Check the statute of limitations on each file. There are numerous litigation-related statutes of limitations, ranging from a ninety-day notice of claim to perfecting an appeal in six or nine months, to three years in filing various tort actions. In other practice areas, tax forms, Article 78 proceedings, administrative appeals, construction liens, and grievances to real property tax assessments, all must be filed or served by specific dates. Recognize, understand and comply with time limitations on each file.

On cases in suit, expect a full and active litigation calendar awaiting compliance. Immediately review upcoming trial dates, expert disclosure and note of issue filing deadlines, court dates, appearances, depositions, motion return dates, and brief, pleading, and discovery document filing dates. Ask for a run of the calendar for the next six months. Also, expect that some active and upcoming dates may not be docketed on the calendar. Discover these by reviewing each case file, and communicating with opposing counsel or the court. In civil litigation, many cases are run by judicial preliminary conference scheduling order, which directs that each phase of the case occur by a certain date. Check these immediately in every case. If extensions are needed on the preliminary conference scheduling order, issue letters to this effect well before the close of the discovery period. Determine what can be adjourned, and what needs to be dealt with. Courts and opposing counsel are generally cooperative about adjourning matters when disability strikes, but need as much advance notice as possible.

10. Reassure the existing clients that their cases are being handled properly, and that the Affected Attorney will return to the practice soon, if that is the case. Consider meeting the clients personally to reassure them and answer their questions. After taking care of the immediate concerns, review each file in detail. If the Affected Attorney will be out for a significant length of time but will return at some point, and the clients have not engaged other counsel, as the Responsible Attorney one of your concerns will be to maintain the revenue stream to keep the practice financially healthy. Consider drafting an internal case management plan for each file. This should move the files ahead in an orderly and sequenced fashion and flag relevant compliance dates.
APPENDIX 2E

CHECKLIST OF CONCERNS WHEN ASSUMING THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR ANOTHER ATTORNEY’S PRACTICE (PURCHASE OR ACQUISITION)

The term “Acquiring Attorney” refers to the attorney purchasing or acquiring the law practice. “Selling Attorney” refers to the attorney selling, transferring or otherwise terminating the practice. Make sure you are familiar with RPC 1.17.

1. Status of Files. If possible, the Acquiring Attorney and the Selling Attorney should discuss the status of open files – what has been completed, what has not, what has been billed, what has been paid, etc.

2. Consider the overhead costs involved in acquiring a practice or the responsibility for a practice for an interim period.

3. Where the Acquiring Attorney does not have the expertise in one or more of the areas in which the Selling Attorney practiced, the Acquiring Attorney may refer such matters to other practitioners.

4. Immediately determine responsibility or the lack of responsibility for the IOLA and attorney escrow accounts. Rights and obligations of the Acquiring Attorney must be known – potential liability is significant.

5. Consider and recognize the personalities and practice habits of the Selling Attorney and Acquiring Attorney. For example, if the Selling Attorney met with clients in their homes or places of business, or if the staff was actively involved in the Selling Attorney’s client relations, etc., the Acquiring Attorney should consider continuing in this same manner or advising the clients of the Acquiring Attorney’s practices.

6. Consider whether to maintain the same fee policy as the Selling Attorney. If possible, determine in advance whether hourly rates or set fees will be used, and at what amounts, and whether to use retainer agreements. Disclosure of these items is required under the rules governing the sale of a law practice. (See RPC 1.17).

7. If time and the Selling Attorney’s condition allow, that attorney should introduce the Acquiring Attorney to nonlawyer staff members, and referral sources such as insurance agents, bankers, realtors, accountants with whom the Selling Attorney worked. If the Selling Attorney is not available to assist in this capacity, the Acquiring Attorney should make immediate contact with those individuals, not only for purposes of preserving client relations, but to determine location of any missing clients, history of clients, etc. Many clients work with a team of advisors, and with the client’s consent, the Acquiring Attorney should have discussions with each of these other professionals.

8. Review and analyze the Selling Attorney’s technology systems for compatibility with Acquiring Attorney’s systems. Because of the constant change in technology, the Selling Attorney or his or her staff should not only participate in transferring current technology in use, but also provide access to systems that historically have been used by the Selling Attorney but which are not kept current. There is a significant amount of client information in the old files and systems.

9. If the practice is being sold, whether by the Selling Attorney or his or her estate, RPC 1.17 must be fully reviewed and understood. There are critical notice and time requirements which must be followed.

10. Immediately notify the Selling Attorney’s accountant and/or bookkeeper and schedule a meeting in order to fully understand the financial reporting policy and habits of the Selling Attorney. If the Selling Attorney did his or her own accounting and tax preparation, the Acquiring Attorney’s accountant should be given immediate access to those books and records that may be available to determine tax and financial liabilities of the Selling Attorney and the Acquiring Attorney.

11. Contact firms or practices with which the Selling Attorney was associated to determine whether any files remain with those practices. This will save the Acquiring Attorney a significant amount of time “searching” for files demanded by clients for past representation by the Selling Attorney. Also determine who bears the cost and the responsibility for acquiring or copying those files: the Acquiring Attorney or the Selling Attorney.

12. Consider file storage. The older the practice, the more time and expense will be involved in file review and management. This can be an expensive and cumbersome long-term solution. Bear in mind that, eventually, someone will have to review stored files and make sure they are returned to clients or disposed of in a manner that protects client confidentiality.

13. Determine whether “closed” files contain valuable or original documents such as wills, agreements, etc. Practices differ: one attorney’s “closed” files may be considered another attorney’s “open and continuing” files. For example, an attorney may habitually notify clients following every service that the representation has ceased and close a file. Others may never take this step and always assume that the client may be coming back for further representation.

14. In returning files, ensure that you are returning files to the “client.” Obtain appropriate written consents from the clients or an authorized personal representative before returning files to a client’s spouse, or family members.

15. Review “vendor” relationships with the Selling Attorney’s vendors to determine whether prepayments were made for services or products that are not going to be used and whether bills are due for storage of files, stationery, supplies, etc.

16. In open estate files, determine whether the Selling Attorney’s practices are consistent with the Acquiring Attorney’s practices with respect to what services are covered on a quoted fee. For example, is a fee for probate limited to just the probate of the will or does it cover estate tax return preparation, will contests, etc.? Carefully review retainer letters and send modifications if necessary. Note that the RPC 1.17 requires notice as to whether the Acquiring Attorney is going to honor the Selling Attorney’s retainer/engagement agreements and arrangements. Arrangements differ. As the Acquiring Attorney, make sure you know what you are agreeing to before stating that you are honoring “all” the arrangements with all the clients.
17. Review accounts receivable when you are purchasing an attorney’s practice. You may need to take steps with clients who have a poor payment history.

18. Consider referring a client to another attorney. Know your limitations, both with time and expertise. You need not assume all clients as an Acquiring Attorney.

19. When returning files to clients who have requested them, make a decision as to what you are returning. Will it be everything in the file? Are you responsible for anything in the file for which you will want to retain copies for your own liability protection? Are there documents that, under the rules, can and should be retained? Clients are entitled to original copies of their files (assuming they have paid their bills), but copies of the files may be retained for the benefit of the Selling Attorney so that the attorney or his or her estate could defend any claims against them. Proceed with caution.

20. Continuing liability insurance. If the attorney has died or has retired from practice, reporting endorsement coverage or “tail coverage” should be obtained. In the event of death, the policy may provide reporting endorsement coverage for a period of time at no additional cost. See Appendix 24 for further information.
APPENDIX 2F

CHECKLIST FOR THE FIDUCIARY OF A SOLO PRACTITIONER

If you have been appointed as the Executor or Administrator of the estate of an attorney who is practicing as a solo practitioner at the time of his or her death, it is important to quickly address many issues that are unique to the deceased practitioner’s practice. This is especially true if the death of the solo practitioner was sudden and unexpected.

If a solo practitioner has died, his or her clients for whom services were being performed at the time of death must be advised immediately. In addition, steps must be taken to insure that those clients are properly advised as to the status of their matter and how they may retain substitute counsel. This must be done in a manner that will preserve the attorney-client privilege. This checklist is intended to address those matters that are unique to being the executor of an attorney’s estate. It is not, however, an exhaustive list of all matters that are to be handled by an executor of an estate. The estate’s legal counsel should be consulted to ensure that your duties are properly carried out during the administration of the estate.

As stated below, all of these issues should be addressed while the attorney is alive and well. Many matters involving an attorney’s practice are time sensitive and, if not handled properly in the event of death, the estate may find itself faced with unnecessary liability. Hopefully, this checklist can act as a planning tool as well as a tool to be used in a time of crisis upon an attorney’s death.

1. Retain legal counsel immediately. Legal counsel should be retained immediately to review the open matters that were being handled by the deceased attorney. If the attorney has designated an attorney to handle the closing of his or her office that attorney should be contacted immediately. The attorney’s will and other estate planning documents including trusts or written instructions should be reviewed.

   A designated attorney can ensure that the attorney-client privilege is maintained for the protection of the client. Hopefully, he or she has also had conversations with the planning attorney so that new counsel is aware of what needs to be done with respect to closing or transferring the practice.

2. The Advisory Team. There will, of course, be many matters that must be handled during the administration of an estate. The items listed above are only a few of the many matters that must be addressed. However, a solo practitioner’s practice is unique in that it cannot continue to operate during the administration of an estate without a licensed and qualified attorney in place to take care of clients’ matters. Because it may not be possible for someone to immediately step in and take over a practice, it is extremely important that a team of qualified advisors be quickly assembled to ensure that the practice and its clients are protected.

3. Work with staff. If the attorney had a secretary or assistants working with him or her at the time of death, contact them and determine what emergencies must be attended to and what needs to be done to begin the closing process.
If possible, retain and compensate staff during the closing phase of the practice. In many cases, staff members have a relationship with the clients of the practice and a great deal of knowledge that will be helpful to you as executor and to the advisors for the estate.

4. Preservation of the practice. It may be important to the attorney’s estate to ensure that the value of the practice is maintained in order to allow the estate to sell the practice to another attorney or law firm. If an Assisting Attorney has been designated as described above, he or she may be the intended transferee. Consult with legal counsel for the estate to be certain that the proper steps are being taken to maintain the value of the practice within the estate.

5. Contact accountant. Contact the deceased attorney’s bookkeeper and accountant immediately to ensure that work in process is properly billed, that receivables are collected and that all financial matters involving the practice are properly taken care of as soon as possible. All trust accounts should be carefully reviewed by estate counsel and the accountant for the firm to ensure that funds are properly handled during the administration of the estate.

6. Office matters. Contact the landlord and, if necessary, desirable and appropriate, arrange for the assignment of the lease to the Assisting Attorney, the termination of the lease or the subletting of the lease to another party.

   Contact all vendors and stop services as soon as possible. Cancel all subscriptions and electronic or online legal research services.

   Contact equipment leasing companies (including vehicle leasing companies) as soon as possible. In some cases, vehicle lease arrangements will provide for a termination of the lease in the event of death. This should be investigated. If leases cannot be terminated without penalty, subleasing should be considered. Otherwise, it will be necessary to set aside enough funds in order to pay the leasing fees for the duration of the lease terms.

   Notify utility companies of the change in the customer. During the administration of the estate, it may be necessary to have the estate as the customer.

   Contact all associations with which the attorney had memberships and terminate the memberships. This would include the New York, American and any local or specialty bar associations. Office staff should be helpful in determining what memberships are in effect.

   Continue malpractice insurance if necessary. Most policies will provide that the insured must be insured at the time a claim is made against the attorney. Therefore, obtain “Reporting Endorsement Coverage” that will provide protection to the attorney’s estate until all applicable statutes of limitations expire. The carrier may provide such coverage at no cost in the event of death. This should be determined immediately.

7. Plan Ahead. A practice and its value can quickly disappear without proper administration at the time of death. In addition there can be significant liability for the estate if the practice is not properly taken care of in such a time of crisis. If a solo practitioner has requested that you act as the executor or trustee for his or her estate, you should address all of these items with the attorney during the estate planning stages. None of these matters should be left until the time of death to address.
APPENDIX 2G

CHECKLIST FOR LAWYERS’ BUSINESS
DISASTER PLANNING AND RECOVERY

Imagine yourself as a lawyer whose offices have just been closed as a result of a “disaster,” whether it is a fire, flood, windstorm, terrorist attack or the product of some other natural or man-made event. Building management has notified you that, in all likelihood, you will not be permitted to re-enter the building for at least a week or maybe longer. To heighten the sense of urgency, assume you or your firm have no disaster recovery plan to which you can refer and thus no step-by-step approach to handling the situation. This is not an event anyone expects, but it is a risk faced by every lawyer, regardless of practice setting or locale.

After you kick yourself for not having a disaster plan, what are your first moves? The best answers are likely to be found as you explore these three questions: How do we contact, reassure and communicate with our employees? How do we notify and communicate with our clients? What must be done to put the firm “back in business”?

In order to protect your practice against many of the adverse effects of a catastrophic event, you or your firm should have a business continuity plan in place. It is important that the plan be available in all events. Post it on the firm’s computer server; file it with the firm’s remotely stored back-up files; send it to every lawyer in the firm and every key administrator and assistant. Implementation of such a plan following the occurrence of a catastrophic event impacting your practice can help put you on a path to disaster recovery. The following outlines a methodology for developing a business continuity plan for catastrophic events and related considerations.

A. Impact Analysis

1. Perform an impact study of catastrophic events to identify functions and services the firm considers critical (i.e., for which continuity is required at all times).
   a. Include specific disaster scenarios causing different levels of disruption
   b. Examine alternative methods for conducting the firm’s business, depending on the degree of disruption
   c. Examine methods for uninterrupted provision of critical services
   d. Examine recovery time frames for all functions and services
   e. Examine methods of dealing with individual/personal disasters (e.g., sudden death or disability of a partner)

B. Plan Preparation

1. Identify the location of at least the following:
   a. List of all clients and client matters
   b. Contact lists; in the case of all contacts which would need to be made, be sure to have specific names, addresses and telephone numbers
c. Client files
   i. Physical
   ii. Electronic

d. Calendar and docket for all client matters

e. Billing records

f. Financial records
   i. Firm operating records
   ii. Client funds

2. Write a business continuity plan (the “Plan”) in case of a catastrophic event; identify who in your firm will be responsible for each task set forth in the Plan.

a. Contact law firm members and all staff
   i. The first concern after any disaster should be to locate and ensure the safety of the firm’s members, including all staff. Next, families should be advised that staff members are safe. This will be an easier process if telephone lists or directories with home and mobile numbers are routinely distributed (and mailed to all personnel).
   ii. Consider using a conferencing service provider, which will enable conference calls among all practice and administrative groups. There are some free alternatives available.

b. Contact clients
   i. Once you have contacted all staff and ensured their safety, the next step is to contact clients to assure them that the firm is in a position to continue to represent them and to notify them of any interim or new contact information.
   ii. To assist in this process, consider the following:
      (A) Establish a small command center immediately. Equip the site with at least five or six telephones, four to five personal computers and up to ten local telephone lines. This center will become home to your disaster team and, during the first several days, the focal point of all staff and clients. You may be able to have calls to the firm’s main number or DID lines transferred to the command center. For smaller firms or solo practitioners, make arrangements to use your home, a local hotel or motel or another lawyer’s office (perhaps by making advance reciprocal arrangements with that lawyer).
      (B) As client contact is made, the command center should be notified, and the client’s name and contact numbers centrally recorded. Do not alarm clients by repeatedly contacting them to assure them that your firm is “okay.”
Repeated and haphazard contact will send a different message, one that says all is not well and that you have no plan.

c.  Contact courts
i.  If you have cases pending, you will need to contact the courts to determine if their facilities were affected by the disaster and, if so, what plan of action they have devised. The courts are also a good source for obtaining records that have been lost or destroyed.

ii.  Have “at the ready” a master application form to go to the administrative judge(s) requesting case adjournment(s) and designate a responsible attorney (e.g., head of litigation or deputy) to act on it when necessary.

d.  Contact others
i.  Contact banks for replacement checks and bank records
ii.  Contact payroll service

e.  Office space/furnishings
i.  Identify/communicate alternative work locations

It may be only a tent or other temporary shelter, but you need a temporary office during the time that your office is being repaired. You will want it to be as close to your office as possible. Whatever situation you arrange, assure that there is some private area in which you can converse with clients. Post a sign where your office was, directing visitors to your temporary quarters.

Some firms have identified other firms similar to them – “twins,” if you will – and made arrangements with their twin(s) for the firms to accommodate each other in case of a catastrophic event. Consider identifying a “twin” for your firm and establishing mutually cooperative contingency plans. Your firm’s “twin” might not even be another law firm (e.g., consider accounting firms, brokerage firms, etc.). This is obviously intended as a possible temporary solution. Be very aware of the need to address conflict of interest and confidentiality issues in this context.

ii.  Other suggestions
(A)  Call local realtor to find office space
(B)  Share space with others temporarily (lawyers, accountants)
(C)  Obtain (rent, borrow or purchase) furnishings (desks, chairs, lamps, filing cabinets, bookshelves, etc.)
(D)  Contact vendors concerning temporary location
(E)  Contact Post Office and other delivery services to stop delivery to damaged location and re-route to temporary location
f. Telephone and Internet service
   i. Arrange to have telephone calls forwarded to new number or arrange for a telephone answering service with prepared message until new system in place
   ii. Arrange temporary service with a local telephone company at a temporary location
   iii. Phones, Internet connections, mobile phones

g. Equipment
   i. Contact equipment vendors regarding existing leases/contracts and your/their performance obligations under the terms of lease or contract
   ii. Types of equipment needed
      (A) Computers, servers and network capabilities
      (B) Printers; scanners; copiers; fax machines
   iii. Identify laptops and other equipment owned by the firm that might be pulled back from home use during recovery period

h. Office supplies
   i. Contact supply vendor to obtain necessary supplies
   ii. Contact printer to print stationery, business cards, etc.
   iii. Contact forms vendors (billing forms, other forms)

i. Library
   i. Establish link with providers, such as Lexis, Loislaw, or Westlaw at your new office location
   ii. If necessary, evaluate possibility/cost of repairing books and identify subscriptions/volumes to be replaced immediately

j. Documents and records
   i. Client documents and records (opposing counsel/clients/Secretary of State’s Office/court clerks may be able to assist with copies and reconstruction of events, dates, deadlines, etc.)
      (A) Leases
      (B) Wills
      (C) Agreements
      (D) Settlements
      (E) Corporate records
(F) Docket and calendar records
(G) Pleading files and court papers
(H) Client billing information
(I) Current address of client’s counsel and contacts
(J) Billable time and receivables information
(K) Correspondence

ii. Firm documents and records
(A) Leases/subleases (landlord, leasing companies may have copies)
(B) Agreements (other parties may have copies)
(C) Client list of names, addresses, phone numbers
(D) Client files and billing records (opposing counsel/clients may be able to provide copies)
(E) Accounts receivable information
(F) “Work-in-process” information/status reports
(G) Financial records (CPA may be able to provide copies)
(H) Insurance policies, broker information (insurance company has policy)
(I) Inventory of physical assets
(J) Payroll and employee records (payroll service, employees may be able to provide information to reconstruct)

iii. Solo practitioners and small firm attorneys should give serious consideration to off-site backup of computer files, to the extent you have not already done so. You may also wish to start a process of scanning or electronic imaging of key documents in your files, back-up copies of which should also be stored off-site.

k. Malpractice insurance issues
i. After a disaster, a law firm may be exposed to malpractice claims resulting from the difficult and time-consuming nature of recovering lost or destroyed records. Below are some of the issues that may arise.

(A) The most frequent source of claims is likely to be failure to take action within a specified time period. Usually, this is seen in the failure to file an action within the statutory period. Possibilities include lawyers sued for failure to file pleadings within the permissible time, failure to comply with orders for filing of any response or other document within a specified time and a host of other errors or omissions that all result from a failure to keep and adhere to a good calendar.
(B) Lack of confidentiality may arise as records that were blown about are recovered.

(C) Some clients may allege that their rights or positions were not prosecuted with sufficient zeal as available records and evidence were lost.

(D) New clients may be in dire straits and become unreasonable if their concerns cannot be addressed and resolved promptly. Unrealistic expectations often turn into claims against a lawyer when no one else can solve the problem or has sufficient assets to address the issues.

ii. If the disaster is widespread, the courts and government are likely to be sympathetic to the plight of those affected. For instance, as a result of the World Trade Center disaster, Governor Pataki signed several executive orders designed to suspend and delay the statutes of limitations for certain actions. At the time, then-Chief Judge Judith Kaye also issued a statement to the members of the New York State Bar stating that the courts would be understanding and honor requests for adjournments where appropriate. Attorneys should apprise themselves of any such actions on the part of the government.

iii. In any event, you should contact the courts and opposing counsel, notify them of your situation and new contact information, and request copies of documents for pending cases and time extensions where necessary. In addition, contact your professional liability carrier and obtain information and advice about how to avoid malpractice in event of missed deadlines and other potential errors or omissions resulting from the disaster.

p. Termination of Obligations. To terminate or cancel legal, commercial or business obligations of Planning Attorney including, if reasonable under the circumstances, terminating, cancelling, extending or modifying any office lease or lease of equipment, such as a copier, computer or other equipment.

q. Insurance. To purchase, renew, maintain, cancel, make claims against or collect benefits under fire, casualty, professional liability, or other office insurance of Planning Attorney, to notify any professional liability insurance carriers of Planning Attorney’s death, disability, incapacity or other inability to act and to cooperate with such insurance carriers regarding matters related to Planning Attorney’s coverage, including the addition of Closing Attorney as an insured under said policy.

r. Taxes. To prepare, execute file or amend income, information or other tax returns or forms and to act on behalf of Planning Attorney’s law practice in dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, any division of the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance, or any office of any other tax department or agency.

s. Settlement of Claims. To settle, compromise, or submit to arbitration or mediation all debts, taxes, accounts, claims, or disputes between Planning Attorney’s law practice and any other person or entity and to commence or defend all actions affecting Planning Attorney’s law practice.

t. Execution of Instruments. To execute, as Planning Attorney’s attorney-in-fact, any deed, contract, affidavit or other instrument on behalf of Planning Attorney.

u. Attorney as Fiduciary. To resign any position which Planning Attorney holds as a fiduciary, such as executor or trustee, and to notify other named fiduciaries, if any, and beneficiaries of the estate or trust; if the trust or will does not name a successor fiduciary, to apply to the court for appointment of a successor fiduciary and to confer with the personal representative of the Planning Attorney’s estate with respect to the obligation of such personal representative to account for the assets of the estate or trust that Planning Attorney was administering.

Such compensation shall be based upon the time allocated to and complexity associated with successfully closing the law practice. Closing Attorney agrees to maintain accurate and complete time records for the purpose of determining his compensation. APPENDIX 6

PCS AND PLLCS: APPOINTING THE APPROPRIATE AGENT TO MANAGE A SOLO LAW PRACTICE IN THE EVENT OF DEATH, DISABILITY, INCAPACITY OR OTHER INABILITY TO PRACTICE LAW

When an attorney practices law as a solo practitioner, he is able to delegate authority to act on his behalf through a power of attorney. However, if the attorney practices in the form of an entity such as a Professional Service Corporation (“PC”) or a Professional Limited Liability Company (“PLLC”) in which he is the only member, it is necessary that the appropriate entity pre-authorize someone other than the sole member to act on behalf of the entity in the event of such member’s inability to practice law.

If the attorney and the entity have not properly planned for the attorney’s death, illness or other inability of the attorney to conduct his affairs, the PC or the PLLC is not lawfully able to continue the practice of law during the incapacity because no authorized agent has been empowered to act on behalf of the entity. However, this can be easily remedied during the planning process by executing appropriate entity resolutions.

The PC or PLLC must have resolutions in place that state when and how an Assisting Attorney, Closing Attorney or other agent may act on behalf of the entity.

Sample minutes of a PC meeting that accomplish this purpose are set forth in this section. Similar documents should be prepared for a single-member PLLC.

In lieu of a formal meeting, the appointment of an Assisting Attorney, Closing Attorney or other agent by a sole practitioner who is the sole shareholder/director of a corporation may be accomplished by a Consent of Shareholder, pursuant to BCL Section 615, or consent of the Board of Directors for Action Without a Meeting, pursuant to BCL Section 708.

In the case of a PLLC, the appointment of an Assisting Attorney, Closing Agent or other agent may be accomplished by a provision in the PLLC’s Operating Agreement, pursuant to LLC Section 417 or by Action Without a Meeting, pursuant to LLC Section 407.

The Chair stated that in the event the sole shareholder of the Corporation is no longer able to practice law, whether on a permanent or a temporary basis, a designee should be appointed who could thereafter act, in the capacity of the sole Shareholder. He noted the sole Shareholder and Director could appoint a licensed attorney who would act in the position of President of this Corporation until such time as the practice of the Corporation is sold or, in the case of temporary incapacity, the sole Shareholder was able to return to practice. He recommended that ________________________________ be appointed to this position in such an event.

The Chairman further stated that this individual would be appointed to act on behalf of the Corporation and to perform any and all duties, take any and all actions and to execute any and all documents necessary in the event the sole Shareholder of the Corporation could no longer perform the day-to-day operations of the Corporation due to his death, disability or incapacity. FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Secretary of this Corporation be directed to append to the minutes of this meeting and to include in the records of the Corporation any and all agreements and documentation to which the Corporation is a party that evidence the appointment of __________________________ in the capacity set forth in the foregoing resolutions.

There being no further business to come before the meeting, it was, upon motion duly made, seconded and unanimously adopted, adjourned.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR ATTORNEY’S WILL:
INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING MY LAW PRACTICE

I currently practice law as a solo practitioner. In order to provide a smooth transition for my clients and to assist my family, I am providing these guidelines to my Executor and any attorney(s) representing my Executor.

If my practice can be sold to a competent lawyer, I authorize my Executor to make such sale for such price and upon such terms as my Executor may negotiate, subject, however, to compliance with New York’s Rules of Professional Conduct and other applicable provisions of law. If such sale is possible, I believe that it will provide maximum benefits for my clients as well as my employees and family. [It is my preference that the practice be sold to my associate, ________________[name], if satisfactory terms can be reached with respect to such a sale; (or It is my wish that my Executor first consider a sale of my practice to my colleague, ________________[name], if satisfactory terms can be reached with respect to such a sale . . .).]

Such a sale should include the transfer of all my client files (and his agreement to hold the same or to transfer them to any clients requesting such transfer), as well as all office furnishings and equipment, books, and rights under my office lease and any outstanding contracts with my firm, such as software and publishing companies, equipment leases, . . .].

If my practice cannot be sold and I have active client files, I recommend that, subject to consent of my clients, estate planning and probate files be referred to (name); real estate files to (name); corporation, partnership, and limited liability company files to (name); family law matters to (name); and personal injury files to (name).

In either instance, I recognize that my practice has developed because of personal relationships with my clients and that they are free to disregard my suggestions.

Regardless of the method of disposing of my practice, I authorize my Executor to take all actions necessary to close my law practice and dispose of its assets. In doing so and without limiting the foregoing, my Executor may do each of the following:

(a) Engage one or more attorneys to wind up my law practice, make arrangements to complete work on active files and to allocate compensation for past and future services.

(b) Continue employment of staff members to assist in closing my practice and arrange for their payment, and to offer key staff members such incentives as may be appropriate to continue such employment for as long as my Executor deems it appropriate.

(c) Request that the attorney(s) engaged to wind up the practice, with my Executor’s assistance, where appropriate:

(i) Enter my office and utilize my equipment and supplies as helpful in closing my practice.

(ii) Obtain access to my safe deposit boxes and obtain possession of items belonging to clients.
(iii) Take possession and control of all assets of my law practice including client files and records.

(iv) Open and process my mail and email.

(v) Examine my calendar, files, and records to obtain information about pending matters that may require attention.

(vi) Notify courts agencies, opposing counsel, and other appropriate entities of my death and, with client consent, seek and obtain extensions of time.

(vii) Notify clients and those who appear to be clients of my death and that it is in their best interests to obtain other counsel.

(viii) Obtain client consent to transfer client property and assets to other counsel.

(ix) Provide clients with their property and assets and copies of material in their files and return unearned retainers and deposits.

(x) File notices, motions and pleadings on behalf of clients who cannot be contacted prior to immediately required action.

(xi) Contact my malpractice carrier concerning claims or potential claims, to notify of my death, and to obtain extended reporting or “tail” coverage.

(xii) Dispose of closed and inactive files by delivery to clients, storage, and arranging for destruction, remembering that certain records are to be preserved for a period of time in accordance with applicable ethics and court rules and best professional practice, and that files relating to minors should be kept for five years after the minor’s eighteenth birthday.

(xiii) Send statements for unbilled services and expenses and assist in collecting receivables.

(xiv) Pay current liabilities and expenses of my practice, terminate leases, and discontinue subscriptions, listing, and memberships.

(xv) Determine if I was serving as registered agent for any corporations and, if so, notify the corporation of the need to designate a new registered agent (and perhaps registered address).

(xvi) Determine if I was serving as an Executor or Trustee of any estate or trust, or in any other fiduciary capacity and, if so, determine the appropriate parties to be notified of the need, if any, to designate a successor fiduciary; take the steps deemed necessary to obtain discharge of my responsibilities in such fiduciary capacity.

(xvii) Rent or lease alternative space if a smaller office would serve as well as my present office.

In performing the foregoing, my Executor is to preserve client confidences and secrets and the attorney-client privilege and to make disclosure only to the extent necessary for such purposes. For example: Client files are to be reviewed only by employees of my firm, to whom attorney-client privilege attaches (e.g., my secretary, my paralegal, my associates (if any), or attorneys retained by my Executor to assist him in closing the practice). It is for this reason that I have authorized my Executor to retain the services of these personnel, and to give them sufficient incentives to remain in the employ of the firm through its wind-up. Though there are special rules permitting disclosure of certain client information in connection with the sale of a practice, my Executor is to abide scrupulously with such rules. My Executor may rely on employees of my firm to (i) supply data concerning the outstanding fees owed by my clients at the time of my death, and the unused retainers paid by clients for which services have not yet been rendered; (ii) to communicate with clients concerning the disposition of their files; and (iii) to review clients’ files in response to any inquiries that arise in the course of my estate’s administration.

My Executor shall be indemnified against claims of loss or damage arising out of any acts or omissions where such acts or omissions were in good faith and reasonably believed to be in the best interest of my estate and were not the result of gross negligence or willful misconduct, or, if my Executor is an attorney licensed to practice in New York, such acts or omissions did not relate to my Executor’s representation of clients as an attorney retained by those clients. Any such indemnity shall be satisfied first from assets of my law practice, including my malpractice insurance coverage.

TRANSFER OF A LAW PRACTICE

Until 1989, lawyers in America were perhaps the only corps of professional people who were prohibited from recognizing any financial value from their good names and the goodwill of their practices. We were told that clients were not chattels or vendible commodities, that lawyers were not tradesmen, and that the sale of law practices would necessarily involve the disclosure of client confidences and secrets, a serious violation of a core principle of our profession. Lawyers, therefore, had nothing to sell but their office furniture and their libraries.

In 1989, however, the Supreme Court of California promulgated a new rule of professional conduct that for the first time permitted the sale of the goodwill aspects of a deceased lawyer’s practice by his or her surviving spouse or estate. In 1990, given that impetus, the American Bar Association adopted a new Rule 1.17 to its Model Rules of Professional Conduct that proposed, even more expansively, to permit the sale of law practices. Since the ABA has no authority to promulgate rules enforceable in any of our jurisdictions, each had to decide for itself whether it would follow California’s and the ABA’s lead. Indeed, it was not long before a substantial number of them did, and now no fewer than 41 jurisdictions permit such transfers, whether by rule or otherwise, New York included. New York’s rule governing the sale of a law practice can be found at RPC 1.17, of the New York State Rules of Professional Conduct.

What the rule means, in general terms, is that lawyers, their personal representatives and their estates may transfer for value, under specifically stated limited conditions, not only the property comprising the physical plants in which they practice, but also the value of their own good names, their reputations and the cases and matters they have in their offices, and they can do so whether upon a lawyer’s retirement, disability, or death. Attorneys licensed to practice in more than one jurisdiction, therefore, should take extreme care to identify the conditions under which they may transfer their respective practices for value. The following information pertains only to the New York rule.

Who May Transfer a Law Practice for Value?

Lawyers retiring from the private practice of law, or law firms one or more of whose members are retiring from the private practice of law within the firm, or the personal representatives of deceased, disabled or “missing” lawyers may sell the lawyers’ or firms’ law practices, including their goodwill.

We deal here primarily with solo practitioners, however. For many years, law firm partners have found legitimate ways, though not authorized by rule, to transfer the value of their practices upon retirement, disability or death, usually by means of in-house contractual arrangements with their long existing or even newly acquired partners or associates. Until now, solo practitioners have never had that opportunity, and that was the inequity of the former rule. Now they may do so.

But not only may solo practitioners or their personal representatives, by specific rule, and for value, transfer the goodwill and other proprietary aspects of their practices upon retirement, disability or death; so also may non-solo law firms by specifically stated means. It would appear, therefore, that the inclusion in the new rules of a specific grant of right to members of non-solo law firms represents merely the drafters’ acknowledgment of the existence of an already acceptable, long standing end, but not necessarily its means.
Interestingly, the rule also applies to situations wherein lawyers are missing, but it does not define the term “missing.” We will use “missing” to refer to attorneys absent without explanation or reason for more than 21 days.

To Whom May a Law Practice Be Transferred for Value?

A private practice may be sold to one or more other lawyers or law firms. That obviously includes any practitioner licensed and in good standing to practice law in the State of New York and any similarly situated New York law firm. Does it mean that a practice may be sold to a non-New York lawyer or law firm? The rule doesn’t address the question, but since those unlicensed in New York are generally not entitled to practice here, presumably they would be excluded.

What about multi-jurisdictional firms, i.e., those with offices in more than one jurisdiction, where each such office is staffed by attorneys licensed to practice in the state wherein they are assigned by the firm as, for example, in New York? Presumably they would qualify for such purpose.

And what about firms whose professional staffs are not licensed to practice in New York and who do not have a presence here? Under proposed multi-jurisdictional practice rules, out-of-state attorneys would be authorized to represent clients in New York in specially restricted ad hoc situations. Would they qualify as purchasers? Obviously, RPC 1.17 does not address that unforeseen issue either, but again, since unlicensed out-of-state lawyers cannot maintain ongoing practices in New York, presumably the application of the rule would prohibit such transfers to them as well.

Clients’ Confidential Information; Conflicts

Most sensitive is the issue of clients’ confidences and secrets. Rule 1.17(b) states the conditions under which confidential client information may be disclosed in the course of negotiations involving the transfer of law practices. It is a critical section of the New York Rules of Professional Conduct Code that cannot be ignored. Initially, Rule 1.17(b)(1) provides that the seller of a law practice may provide prospective buyers with any information not protected as confidential information under Rule 1.6. Rule 1.6 is the key disciplinary rule in New York’s Rules of Professional Conduct that governs the preservation of clients’ confidential information. It defines confidential information as information “gained during or relating to the representation of a client, whatever its source, that is (a) protected by the attorney-client privilege, (b) likely to be embarrassing or detrimental to the client if disclosed, or (c) information that the client has requested be kept confidential.” Rule 1.6(b) then recites when confidential information may be revealed by a lawyer. Reference to it is virtually mandatory in the practice transfer process.

Rule 1.17(b)(2) then provides that, notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 1.6, the seller may provide the prospective buyer with information as to the identity of his or her individual clients (the word “individual” not meant to exclude corporate, partnership or other similar entities) except where the seller has reason to believe that such information or the fact of such representation is itself confidential information (which usually it is not). In that instance, if the client has first been advised of the identity of the prospective purchaser and has granted consent to the proposed disclosure, such information may be provided.

Rule 1.17(b)(2) also states, again notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 1.6, that the selling attorney may provide information concerning the status and general nature of an individual client’s matter, together with information that is available in public court files and information concerning the financial terms of his or her attorney-client relationship and the payment status of the individual client’s account. But there are rather complex qualifications. Rule 1.7(b)(3) provides in substance that prior to disclosing any disclosable confidential information, a selling attorney must provide the prospective purchaser with information regarding matters involved in the proposed sale that [hopefully] will be sufficient to enable the prospective purchaser to determine whether any conflicts of interest exist. Where sufficient information cannot be disclosed without revealing client confidential information, however, the seller may make such disclosures as are necessary for the prospective purchaser to determine whether any conflicts of interest exist, subject, however, to the provisions of Rule 1.17(b)(6). If the prospective purchaser determines the existence of conflicts of interest prior to reviewing such information, or determines during the course of review that a conflict of interest exists, the prospective purchaser cannot review or continue to review the information unless the seller has obtained the consent of the client in accordance with the provisions of Rule 1.6(a)(1).

Since the identity of clients is usually not deemed to be confidential information, it would appear that the revelation of the identity of a seller’s clients (presumably from a client list) would be among the first items of information to provide a prospective purchaser so that he or she might exclude conflicted clients from the transaction or at least render further consideration as to whether their representation would indeed present an impermissible conflict. Not necessarily so, however, under the Rule. It is particularly when the identity of a client is itself confidential that the complexity is at its greatest.

What other identifications might be necessary? Certainly the identities of opposing parties. Some observers believe that the identity of all lawyers representing the parties, as well as of judges and hearing officers, should be disclosed. See Simon’s New York Rules of Professional Conduct Annotated (Thomson Reuters

The protection of confidential client information has always been the core of our professional obligation to our clients. The point to be made about Rule 1.17(b)(3), particularly its second sentence, is that this segment of the negotiation process can be very delicate and the seller should give extreme care in disclosing the very kind of information that the prospective purchaser may require not only to determine whether a conflict exists, but whether he or she even wishes to pursue the business aspects of the proposed transaction. It clearly would not be difficult to fall into a violative trap that subsequently could result in disciplinary proceedings commenced by a discontented client.

It also is important to note that where confidences and secrets are disclosed to a prospective purchaser, he or she must maintain the same confidentiality of such information as if he or she represents the client. That appears clear enough from the rule and it should not be difficult to adhere to unless, of course, such information will somehow impact upon a prospective purchaser’s representation of another client in another unrelated matter. Temptation frequently leads to misconduct. A sample confidentiality agreement can be found in Appendix 13.

“Reasonable Restrictions” and Geographic Considerations

Rule 1.17(a) provides that a seller and buyer may agree upon reasonable restrictions on the seller’s pri-ivate practice of law notwithstanding any other provision of the Rules of Professional Conduct. Obviously this speaks to the seller’s subsequent practice of law and thus to the issue of non-compete agreements. Rule 1.17(a) also provides that “[r]etirement” shall include the cessation of the private practice of law in the geographic area, meaning the county and city, and any other county and city contiguous thereto, wherein the practice to be sold has been conducted.

Rule 5.6(a) prohibits attorneys from participating in a partnership or being party to an employment agreement with other attorneys that restricts the right of any of them to practice law after the termination of a relationship created by the agreement except as a condition to payment of retirement benefits. Rule 1.17(a) overrides that rule with respect to the sale of law practices. The right of clients to select their own lawyers has always been considered paramount to the right of lawyers to participate in non-compete agreements of their own. What is “reasonable” within the context of the sale of a law practice, of course, has never been tested in New York, at least not in published opinions up to this writing.

But Rule 1.17(a) does define as reasonable a geographic area that includes the county and city wherein a lawyer practices, together with a county and city contiguous thereto. Thus, for example, a retiring New York City attorney would “reasonably” be restricted from practicing law in all five counties within the city, as well as in the City of Yonkers, and in Westchester and Nassau counties as well. Note in the rule the use of the mandatory third person “shall” as to the stated geographic areas. Whether a contractual restriction beyond the mandated geographic limits would be “reasonable” has not been decided but probably would be fact-intensive.

Note also N.Y. State Bar Association Ethics Op. 707 (1998) which opines that a lawyer may not retire from one part of a law practice and continue to practice in another part within the same geographic area. Rule 1.17(a) thus is said not to contemplate retirement from one or more areas of practice without retirement from all others within the same geographic area.

What does “in which the practice to be sold has been conducted” mean? Does it mean the city or county of one’s primary office? Does it mean, more likely, any office locale from which one practices? Does it mean any city or county wherein a lawyer regularly or even occasionally has appeared during the course of his or her private practice even though it is not the city or county wherein this office is located? If a Queens County litigator appears regularly throughout Long Island but maintains his or her only office in Queens, can he or she be foreclosed by agreement from practicing in Suffolk County? Would that be a “reasonable” restriction? We do not yet know. If a lawyer maintains offices in several counties throughout New York State, as some do, are the geographic areas wherein those offices are located included within the rule? May a lawyer retire from the practice of law in Westchester County where he or she maintains an office, but not in Albany County where he or she also maintains an office? Such issues have not yet been determined by precedent.

Notification to Clients

When financial evaluations finally have been completed along with other details of the transaction and a basic agreement has been reached for it to be consummated, it is necessary for both participants, jointly and in writing, to notify each of the seller’s clients of the proposed sale. Rule 1.17(c). Such notice must include a statement as to the client’s right to retain other counsel or to take possession of his, her or its file, and also as to the fact that the client’s consent to such a file transfer will be presumed if the client, upon such notice, neglects to take action or fails otherwise to object to it within ninety days from the sending of such notice, subject, however, to any court rule or statute mandating express approval by a client or a court. That imposes upon each client the obligation to take an affirmative step to prevent the transfer of his or her file to the purchasing attorney if that is desired. The rule obviously is intended to avoid prevention of the transaction merely by reason of a client’s neglect, inaction or lack of concern in the approval process. And, of course, despite their own neglect, inaction or lack of concern resulting in the transfer of their files to the purchasing attorney, clients may thereafter always terminate the services of the purchasing attorney.

With regard to fees, clients must also be notified in writing, jointly by both the seller and the buyer, that the existing fee arrangement with the selling attorney will be honored, or that proposed fee increases will be imposed. Obviously that is of particular concern to clients in the grant or withholding of consent. It is important to note that the fee charged to a client by the purchaser cannot be increased by reason of the sale unless permitted in the original retainer agreement with the client or otherwise specifically agreed to by the client. Rule 1.17(e).

The joint written notice to each of the seller’s clients must also include the identity and background of the purchasing attorney, the location of his or her principal office address, his or her bar admission(s), his or her number of years in practice within the jurisdiction, whether the prospective purchaser has ever been disciplined for professional misconduct or convicted of a crime, and whether the prospective purchaser intends to re-sell the practice.

Finally, attorneys should be aware that the former rules that proscribed the sale of a law practice were predicated upon serious concerns about client confidentiality and the fiduciary obligations owed by lawyers to new clients. The current rule that permits the transfer of law practices strikes a different balance. Accordingly, the current rule should ideally be construed strictly and should be expected to result in disciplinary action should it be violated. All doubts as to the propriety of a proposed transfer, or of any ingredient of it, should reasonably be resolved against the transfer.

Valuation

A fundamental consideration in the entire negotiation process involves the question as to what value may be ascribed to a selling practice. That is an issue requiring outside expertise in most instances. It is not the purpose of this material to describe the various means by which a practice may be appraised. Suffice it to say that the determination may become very complex. The reader is referred to the various materials listed at the end of this segment. Also, see “Valuing a Law Practice” in Appendix 11.

Terms of Sale

The Rules of Professional Conduct governing the sale of a law practice do not address the terms of sale. It is not uncommon for the seller of a practice to finance a portion of the sale price, typically over a period of five to ten years. It is generally difficult for the purchaser of a professional practice to obtain financing from a bank for the purchase.

It is possible that the selling price may be based, at least in part, on future revenue generated by the clients of the selling attorney. NYSBA Ethics Opinion No. 961 (2013) provides that a lawyer may sell a practice contingent on the receipt of a percentage of future fees, subject to certain conditions. However, under NYSBA Ethics Opinion No. 699 (1998) it was determined to be not ethical for a newly elected judge to sell his practice with the price based in part on future fees collected from the transferred clients (20% of fees collected for five years). This might be an inducement to the judge to assist the acquiring firm in retaining his former clients, and could result in impropriety or the appearance of impropriety by exploiting his judicial position.
Conclusion

The rules relating to the transfer of law practices in New York are still relatively new and, at this writing, are not yet the subject of much judicial interpretation. Nor do we yet have any authoritative statistics as to the extent to which Rule 1.17 has been utilized. The rule was intended primarily to place solo practitioners on an equal footing with non-solo practitioners in terms of their ability to obtain monetary value from their years of private practice. It probably is fair to state that many solo practitioners are general practitioners, and that some of them have relatively few institutional clients. Assuming that to be true, one cannot help but wonder what monetary value those solo practices may have where they consist of an ever changing clientele, and where (unlike non-solo firms wherein a continuing firm name and its continuing professional staff may provide value) the goodwill aspect of the practice to be sold consists exclusively of the character and professional reputation of the selling attorney who, upon sale, will no longer be an element of the practice. That factor, it would seem, tends to place the solo practitioner on something other than the equal footing that the rule was intended to provide. But for those who in fact have value to sell, as many solo practitioners do, the rule exists to be used. While nothing may be gained from it in many situations, nothing can be lost, and all solo practitioners should at least consider the marketable value of their practices before simply shutting down.

VALUING A LAW PRACTICE

Larry S. Stolzenburg, CPA
Sandhill Investment Management

Buffalo, New York 14202
(716) 852-0279

There are several major approaches to valuing a law practice, or any business for that matter. In this section we will highlight the major areas.

1. Market Value

   One method of valuing a law practice would be using the market value method. This would involve comparing the subject law firm to the actual sales price of similar firms. Since there is little or no data that is generally available for actual sales of law practices, this method is not commonly employed.

2. Rule of Thumb

   A rule of thumb valuation method is simple and direct. However, these attractive features are also the downfall of the method. It is usually too simplistic to value something as complex and varied as law firms using a tool that is overly simplified.

   In general, the rule of thumb method would call for a valuator to multiply the firm’s gross receipts by a multiplier to arrive at fair market value. For instance, the rule of thumb for law practices may be 50% to 100% of gross receipts equal fair market value.

   Example:

   Gross Receipts 600,000.00

   Multiplier 75%

   Fair Market Value 450,000.00

   As you can see, not only is the formula overly simplistic, but the range of values that could be derived from the rule of thumb formula is quite wide ($300,000 at 50% to $600,000 at 100%)

   For these reasons, the rule of thumb value method should be used only as a very loose guide to see if other, more helpful, methods are on target.

3. Buy-Sell Agreements

   Various partnership or shareholder agreements are often found in larger law practices and are often determinative of the value of an ownership interest.

   For instance, our firm has valued many large law firm partnership interests, and it is not at all unusual to see that all of the partners who leave the partnership are paid exactly what is called for in the controlling document. There is no better indication of value than the actual sales price of similar ownership interests.
In smaller practices of say two or three partners, the buy-sell agreements might indicate values that have nothing to do with actual fair market values, but instead are instituted for life insurance planning, estate planning, marital/divorce planning, etc.

4. Accounting Formulas

There are at least three commonly used accounting formulas for valuing law practices:

a. Discounted Future Returns Method – used when past performance is not at all an indicator of future results. For instance, a two year old practice that is growing 100% per year would be a candidate for this method.

b. Capitalized Returns Method – used when past results are expected to be a close approximation of future results. The benefit of this method is that balance sheet information is not required.

c. Excess Earnings Method – is the most popular method for valuing small law practices. It is actually a combination of an income approach and an asset based approach.

In essence, it looks at what the practice has generated in the past in terms of assets and income and assigns a value to those items.

I have prepared an example below of how the excess earnings method works:

Excess Earnings Formula

* Step One – Determine the average annual earnings for the firm before owner’s compensation. Remove any unusual items such as one time contingency fees or one-time expenses.

In an example, the firm has a $40,000 fee in 2012 from a personal injury case which is non-recurring, so an average income is calculated as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Income</th>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

500,000

Divided by 4 ÷ 4

Average Earnings Before Owner’s Compensation 125,000

* Step Two – Determine what the average lawyer with similar training and experience will earn.

In our example we will say that the average lawyer with similar training and experience earns $85,000.

* Step Three – Determine a fair rate of return on the assets used in the business.

In our example, the equity of the firm including accounts receivable and work in process is $50,000. If we assume that a fair rate of return on this amount is 10%, then the return to the owner on capital should be $5,000.
Step Four – Determine a capitalization rate. This is generally a complicated process which requires more space than I have here to explain. For our purposes, let’s assume that a potential buyer of this law practice will require a rate of return of 25% on his investment in order to induce him to invest. (Capitalization rates typically range from 18% to 33%.)

Step Five – Calculate the excess earnings value.

Average 4-year earnings before owner’s compensation:

- Compensation – $125,000
- Less: reasonable replacement wage for similar attorney $<85,000>

Earnings attributable to the business 40,000

Less: reasonable return on invested assets

- (50,000 x 10%) $<5,000>
- Excess earnings 35,000
- Capitalized at 25% (Divided by 25%) ÷ .25 140,000
- Add equity from balance sheet 50,000

Fair market value of firm as of 12/31/13 $190,000

Other Issues

Cash basis accounting – keep in mind that most law practices keep their books on a cash basis of accounting. As a result, neither accounts receivable nor work in process will appear on their financial statements or tax returns. Therefore, when valuing a cash basis law practice, the figures have to be adjusted to include these items.

Contingent fees – can also be an issue in valuing some law practices. Practitioners are split on whether to consider contingent fees to be simply a part of work in process or as something that is so speculative as to be useless to try to value. Those following the latter approach would simply “carve out” the contingent fees and deal with them when and if they are collected.

Client disbursements – technically the IRS treats money that a lawyer disburses on behalf of a client as an account receivable, not an expense. Many practitioners are unaware of this and take a deduction in the year the disbursement is made. The proper treatment is to record a client disbursement as an account receivable and write off the amount only when and if it is certain to be uncollectible.

Often in sales of law practices the seller will keep his cash, accounts receivable, contingent fees, etc. and simply sell the goodwill portion and the fixed assets to the buyer. The excess earnings formula illustrated above can easily be modified to accomplish this result.
APPENDIX 12

In the event that Seller has previously paid by such clients, the amount of any services shall be offset against the Purchase Price set forth hereunder. In such an event Purchaser shall provide Seller with an itemization of the services provided, the time incurred on such matters and the cost of such time. In the event such matter shall include additional services outside the scope of the client’s agreement with the Seller, the Purchaser shall negotiate a separate fee arrangement with the client.

Purchaser’s right of set-off shall not be subject to any order of priority, and shall be exercisable in such amounts (not to exceed the amounts of any such loss) and in such manner as Purchaser in its reasonable discretion may determine.

21. Client Letter. CONFIDENTIALITY AND NON-DISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

(For Use in Prospective Sale or Transfer of a Law Practice)

The undersigned for and on behalf of itself, its affiliates, subsidiaries and agents, including without limitation, [an attorney engaged in the practice of law in the state of New York] [a New York professional corporation engaged in the practice of law], (the “Disclosing Party”) has developed certain confidential and proprietary information in both written form and oral form (“Confidential Information”), which has been and is being disclosed to the undersigned for the sole purpose of entering into discussions regarding possible future business and professional relationships.

In consideration of the Disclosing Party’s disclosure of the Confidential Information to the undersigned, its officers and directors and all affiliates (hereinafter “Recipient”) the undersigned agrees as follows:

1. Disclosure of Confidential Information.
   (a) The Recipient hereby acknowledges that all documents and information owned or developed by the Disclosing Party or pertaining to the Disclosing Party which has or will come into Recipient’s possession or knowledge, unless Recipient provides the Disclosing Party with independent verification to the contrary within fifteen (15) days of the original receipt of such information, is Confidential Information and therefore:
      (i) is proprietary to the Disclosing Party having been designed, developed and accumulated at great expense over lengthy periods of time; and
      (ii) is secret, confidential and unique, and constitutes the exclusive property of the Disclosing Party.
   (b) Excluded from the Confidential Information is any submission or disclosure:
      (i) that can be demonstrated by documentation to have been public information or generally available to the public prior to Recipient’s receipt of such Confidential Information from the Disclosing Party;
      (ii) that can be demonstrated by documentation to have been in Recipient’s possession prior to receipt thereof from the Disclosing Party; and
      (iii) that becomes part of the public information or generally available to the public such as by publication or otherwise, other than as a result of a disclosure by Recipient in breach of this Agreement.

2. Use of Confidential Information.
   (a) Recipient shall not use any of the Confidential Information for any purpose other than for the exclusive purpose set forth above. Recipient agrees that the Confidential Information will not be used in any way detrimental to the Disclosing Party and that such information will be kept confidential by Recipient and its agents; provided, however, that (i) any of such information may be disclosed to such representatives of Recipient who need to know such information for the specific purposes set forth above (it being understood that Recipient’s directors, officers, employees, affiliated entities, accountants, legal counsel and representatives shall be informed by Recipient of the confidential nature of such information and shall agree to treat such information confidentially in accordance with the terms set forth herein) and (ii) except as otherwise provided in this Agreement (including Paragraph “3” below), no disclosure of such information may be made by Recipient or its representatives to any other person or entity without the prior written consent of the Disclosing Party.

[(b) Any of Recipient’s employees, officers, directors, agents and/or representatives granted access to any Confidential Information provided by the Disclosing Party will each be required to agree to the provisions of, and shall sign a copy of, this Agreement.]

3. Required Disclosure. In the event Recipient should be requested or required (by oral questions, interrogations, requests for information or documents, subpoena, civil investigative demand or similar process or as otherwise required by law (“demands”) to disclose Confidential Information supplied to it in the course of Recipient’s dealing with the Disclosing Party, the Recipient will provide the Disclosing Party with prompt notice of such requests so that the Disclosing Party may, at its own cost and expense, seek an appropriate protective order; in the event no such protective order is timely obtained, Recipient is permitted to comply with such demands.

4. Indemnification and Injunctive Relief. Recipient agrees to indemnify the Disclosing Party against all losses, damages, claims or expenses incurred or suffered by the Disclosing Party as a result of Recipient’s breach of this Agreement. Recipient acknowledges that the Confidential Information it will obtain is unique and of a confidential and proprietary nature and that a breach of the terms of this Agreement will be wrongful and may cause irreparable injury to the Disclosing Party. Therefore, in addition to all remedies of law or equity, the Disclosing Party shall be entitled, as a matter of right, to injunctive relief enjoining and restraining Recipient and each and every other person or entity concerned thereby from continuing to act (or failing to act) in violation of the terms hereof. Recipient shall be liable for any and all damages (whether direct, indirect, consequential or otherwise) resulting from any breach of this Agreement.

5. Return of Information. Immediately upon the request of the Disclosing Party, all documentation and records of any nature and kind delivered to Recipient, its directors, officers, employees, accountants, legal counsel, representatives and affiliates shall be promptly returned and all copies of all such documentation, records, etc., made by any person or entity shall be promptly destroyed.

7. Acknowledgments of Recipient. Recipient acknowledges that the Disclosing Party is not making any representation or warranty, expressed or implied, as to the accuracy or completeness of the Confidential Information or any other information concerning the Disclosing Party provided or prepared by or for the Disclosing Party and neither the Disclosing Party nor any of its officers, directors, employees, stockholders, owners, affiliates or agents, will have any liability to the Recipient resulting from the Recipient’s use of the Confidential Information.

9. Waiver. It is further understood and agreed that no failure or delay by the Disclosing Party in exercising any right, power or privilege hereunder will operate as a waiver thereof, not will any single or partial exercise thereof preclude any other or further exercise thereof or the exercise of any right, power or privilege hereunder.

10. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be interpreted and governed under the laws of the State of New York and each party hereby irrevocably and unconditionally consents to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of the State of New York for any action, suit or proceeding arising out of or relating to this Agreement and the transactions contemplated hereby.

INTERRUPTION OF A PRACTICE DUE TO A LAWYER’S SUBSTANCE ABUSE OR MENTAL HEALTH ISSUE

The professional continuity of a law practice, whether it is the practice of a sole practitioner or a law partnership, can be interrupted by an attorney’s alcoholism or drug addiction and/or subsequent treatment for the same. Anecdotal evidence suggests that perhaps as high as eighteen percent of lawyers may find themselves faced with personal issues of alcoholism or drug abuse sometime during their careers and that more than fifty percent of serious cases of attorney misconduct have alcoholism or drug addiction at their root.

In 1977, the New York State Bar Association formed the Lawyer Assistance Committee in an effort to address this serious problem head on. Since that time, eleven local bar association committees have been formed to assist statewide efforts in the identification and treatment of members of the bar so afflicted. Most of the Bar Associations that have formal programs also provide resources and referrals for problems related to mental illness, particularly depression. A list of the Bar Associations having such committees, as well as contact phone numbers for each can be found at www.nysba.org/lap.

In 1990, the New York State Bar Association established the Lawyer Assistance Program. Since its inception, LAP has provided confidential help to hundreds of lawyers and judges each year. The Director of LAP can be reached at 1.800.255.0569.

In 1992, the New York State Legislature passed Section 499 of the Judiciary Law which provides that the relations and communication between a member or authorized agent of a Lawyer Assistance Committee sponsored by a State or local bar association and any person, firm or corporation communicating with such a committee, its members or authorized agents, shall be deemed to be privileged on the same basis as those provided by law between an attorney and client, and that such privilege may be waived only by the person, firm or corporation which has furnished information to the committee. In addition, the law provides that any person, firm or corporation in good faith providing information to, or in any other way participating in the affairs of a Lawyer Assistance Committee shall be immune from civil liability that might otherwise result by reason of such conduct.

Related to the provisions of Judiciary Law Section 499 is Rule 8.3(a). Rule 8.3(a) provides: “A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to that lawyer’s honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer shall report such knowledge to a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon such violation.” Rule 8.3(c) provides: “This Rule does not require disclosure of . . . information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in a bona fide lawyer assistance program.”

Thus, the statute and the Professional Conduct Rules provide members and agents of Lawyer Assistance Committees with highly valuable tools in assisting persons who contact the committees either on their own or on behalf of another person. Any referring person knows that unless he or she agrees, the matters discussed with committee representatives may not be disclosed to anyone who is not a committee member or one of its agents and are privileged on the same basis as those provided by law between attorney and client.
Concern about alcoholism or other drug addiction within a law firm creates a tension between the responsibility to protect clients’ rights, the firm’s reputation and a lawyer’s wellness on the one hand and the fear of violating a colleague’s rights under the Americans with Disabilities Act, standards relating to confidentiality and fear of destruction of personal relationships on the other.

In order to address the obligations of law firms in dealing with an impaired associate or partner, the New York State Bar Association promulgated the Law Office Model Policy which serves as template for law firms throughout the state. A copy of the Model Policy can be found at www.nysba.org/lap.
INTRODUCTION

Dealing with the disease is hard enough, but law firms confronting professional impairment have additional problems. Practice within a firm is carried out in the context of loosely structured professional relationships with ill-defined hierarchies, and except in their early years of practice, lawyers work with little or no supervision. There are few objective measures of work product; “good” is subjective. Firms are structured with a lot of thought to the professional and economic parts of life—defining what kind of practice (full service boutique, something else), size (small, medium, supersized), and how to pay the partners. But little thought is given to establishing disciplinary procedures. There may not even be someone in charge with authority to discipline.

Toss in the idea of collegiality, which is one of those important rules of the road that help organizations endure. But collegiality, so important when you’re having a fight about money, is a barrier to the kind of confrontation that impairment may require. It isn’t my job, my role, or even my right to challenge my colleague about the problem. Professional lives are stressful enough. It is not difficult to find excuses for inappropriate conduct or lawyer negligence. There but for fortune . . . And if I do, am I possibly pushing the firm into the murky area of professional liability for malpractice. It isn’t surprising that lawyers circle their wagons.

All of these behaviors can be downright enabling.

The consequences of ignoring impairment include malpractice, loss of client confidence, and even the departures of qualified staff and colleagues. These can be dire. But there are equally dire consequences to blundering into a problem, ignoring laws and violating confidences and privacy. There are some rules.

DEFINING THE RELATIONSHIP

You cannot make proper decisions about how to confront and manage impairment until you understand the nature of the relationship between the lawyer and the organization (which, for want of a better term, is probably “the firm”). If the relationship is employer-employee, there will be extensive regulation to worry about. If the relationship is that of independent contractor, there will be little regulation. If the relationship is that of partner to the firm, or partner to other partners, the principal concerns will be fiduciary duty and the partnership agreement. All that means a necessary first task is to define the relationship, because the nature of the relationship sets the rules.
Defining the relationship used to be easy. There were employees, and there were partners. In an unusual case there might be a sole proprietor or an independent contractor. Today there are new organizational forms, and lawyers generally make their selection of firm structure for tax advantages. Whether or not the form might require partners to become employees is rarely an important consideration, except where mandatory retirement rules are big issues (and then, employer-employee form is a real problem). Whether the organizational form requires something more than pro forma shareholder meetings is also rarely a consideration. A law firm now can be a general partnership, a limited partnership, a limited liability partnership, a limited liability corporation, and the people who work in the firm can be general partners, limited partners, shareholders, employees, employers, and can have a bewildering combination of attributes that defies pigeonholing.

On April 22, 2003, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its decision in Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 123 S.Ct. 1673 (2003). The opinion outlines the mode of analyzing a lawyer’s relationship to the firm to decide an important question or two. Employer or employee? Owner or worker? Partner? Knowing the status of the lawyer is critical for application of a host of federal and state labor and employment laws, so Clackamas Gastroenterology provides important advice. At issue in the case was whether the medical clinic, which was set up as a professional corporation, was covered by the federal Americans With Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101 et seq. That law is inapplicable to very small businesses; it does not cover an employer unless the employer’s workforce includes 15 or more employees over certain defined times.

The question arose because this clinic had four employee physicians who were actively engaged in the medical practice as shareholders and directors. Because the clinic was set up as a professional corporation, the physicians were formally shareholders who had employment contracts with the clinic and so were nominally employees. That very status made an easy and attractive argument for the terminated employee who wished to sue under federal law. She contended that the physicians could not have it both ways, that they could establish a corporate status to reap tax advantages and limit civil liability, and yet at the same time claim the physician shareholders were partners for purposes of employment law. If the court counted the shareholders as employees, the clinic met the threshold for application of federal law.

The Supreme Court recognized that “we are dealing with a new type of business entity that has no exact precedent in the common law” with state statutes permitting incorporation for the purpose of practicing a profession. In the past the learned professions were not permitted to organize as corporate entities. Since professional corporations are “relatively young participants in the market” with features that vary from state to state, there had been little, if any, true guidance on just how to define and evaluate the relationship of professionals to the organization. That is what the court set out to do in Clackamas Gastroenterology, noting that the resolution of any legal issue depends upon understanding whether the professional is an employee or an owner. That analysis, in turn, requires a thorough understanding of the details of how the professional interacts with the organization. Here are the necessary questions:

- Can the organization hire or fire the individual or set rules and regulations for the individual’s work?
- Does the organization supervise the individual’s work, and to what extent?
- Does the individual report to someone higher in the organization?
An employer is the person or group of persons who owns and manages the enterprise, can hire and fire, can assign tasks and supervise performance and decide how the profits and losses of the business are to be distributed. The fact that such a person has a title (even shareholder or employee) does not determine whether that person is an employee or a proprietor. The Court emphasized that no one factor is controlling, that even the existence of a document called “employment agreement” does not lead inexorably to the conclusion that a party is an employee, and that the answer to the question of status “depends on all of the incidents of the relationship with no one factor being decisive.” The test is all about the substance of the relationship, not what it looks like on its surface.

That means that if the lawyer in a professional corporation has a status functionally equivalent to partnership, the form of the organization does not control. In such a case, partnership law applies. If the lawyer has a status within the firm that permits him or her to influence decision-making and keep a share in profits, losses and liabilities, those factors point to something akin to a partner and partnership law applies. If, in contrast, the lawyer can be terminated or disciplined, works under set rules and regulations, reports to and is supervised by the firm, employment law probably applies because those factors point to employee status.

PARTNERSHIP

If the relationship is not employer-employee but a partnership relationship, the statutory protections do not apply but activities will be governed by the murkier provisions of the common law, including the fiduciary duties extended within partnerships, as well as common law privacy protections.

Theories arising out of the breach of fiduciary duty can be asserted if a partner is disciplined or expelled. Because most of the reported case law turns on the laws of individual states and the provisions of the partnership agreement, they are somewhat limited in precedential value. See, for example, Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft v. Beasley, 728 So.2d 253 (1998) (applying New York partnership law that partners have no common law or statutory right to expel or dismiss another partner, but may provide in the partnership agreement for expulsion under prescribed conditions “which must be strictly applied”); Bohatch v. Butler & Binion, 977 S.W.2d 543 (1998) (applying Texas law, holding that the relationship between partners is fiduciary in character and imposes an obligation of loyalty and utmost good faith, fairness and honesty, but concluding “a partnership exists solely because the partners choose to place personal confidence and trust in one another”); and see, Heller v. Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, 50 Cal.App.4th 1367 (1996) (finding no breach of fiduciary duty in expulsion by executive committee of partner who behaved inappropriately where partnership agreement authorized executive committee to do so).

PRINCIPAL EMPLOYMENT LAWS

Assuming the impaired lawyer holds employee status (as compared to partnership status or something else), two sets of statutes are most important in that they regulate and define the manner in which the organization can confront and address the impaired lawyer.
The federal Americans With Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101 et seq., prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability, which is broadly defined to include a mental or physical condition which substantially limits a major life activity, the existence of a record of a disability, or the perception of a disability. The law also sets certain confidentiality standards and requires accommodation of protected disabilities, but also provides some level of freedom in addressing drug-related dependency. Alcohol-related dependencies fall into a different category altogether, something that firms must always remember in addressing issues under this law.

In addition to the federal law, virtually every state has a separate state statute providing similar, although not necessarily identical, protections. The potential for supplemental state regulation was recognized under federal law. 42 U.S.C. § 12201 provides: “Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to invalidate or limit the remedies, rights, and procedures of any Federal law or law of any State or political subdivision of any State or jurisdiction that provides greater or equal protection for the rights of individuals with disabilities than are afforded by this chapter.” In other words, federal and state law both apply and an employee is entitled to the benefit of the law which offers the greatest protection.

The second group of statutes that are important in addressing impairment of employees are those laws providing protected leave for serious health conditions. The federal law is the Family Medical Leave Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2601 et seq. This statute requires employers (those who employ 50 or more employees) to grant 12 weeks leave during any 12-month period for a variety of conditions, including the employee’s own “serious health condition.” This is another of those federal laws that establishes a level of protection as a floor, but permits greater protection in individual states. 29 U.S.C. § 2651 provides: “Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to supersede any provision of any State or local law that provides greater family or medical leave rights than the rights established under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.”

As is the case with disability protections, a number of states have passed their own laws establishing various periods of protected leave for a variety of conditions, and often applying the requirements to smaller employers. Once again, the leave laws must be evaluated on both a federal and state basis to determine what protection, if any, the employee is entitled to. The leave laws can be important for two reasons. First, they guarantee a protected leave from work for a set period of time. Second, they provide for some level of reinstatement or reemployment. The most protective of the laws require an employee to be returned after leave to the same position of employment with the same benefits, the same responsibilities, the same duties, and perhaps even the same client base.

DISABILITY PROTECTIONS

Title I of the ADA governs employment, regulates the conduct of employers, and places some limits on what employers can do in the employment, management, and terms and conditions of employment for employees who have disabilities. Because the definition of disability is so broad (any physical or mental condition which substantially limits a major life activity), substance abuse impairments meet, at least, the statutory definition. The potential protection of drug-related misconduct was a controversial issue during the debates over ADA; as a consequence, the statute provides only limited protections for drug-related activity.

The statute prohibits employers from making certain disability-related inquiries until there has been a conditional offer of employment. If you ask an applicant how much he or she drinks, you may be asking a medical question because the answer may be diagnostic. Ask whether the applicant has ever been treated for drug addiction and you may end up in ADA-land.\(^4\)

Once a conditional offer of employment has been made, you are free to make those inquiries, and to make them as broadly as you like (provided they are made for every employee being considered for the same class of jobs). Once the employee is hired, however, the window of opportunity slams shut.

After employment has started, only limited disability-related inquiries may be made and they must be “consistent with business necessity.” The restriction on disability-related inquiries during employment (where they are limited to inquiries consistent with business necessity) also limits the ability of employers to inquire into potential substance abuse problems. Before asking, you will always need to test yourself: is this an inquiry that is “consistent with business necessity.” Is it an inquiry that can be justified because the answer matters to the firm?

Because drug abuse (as compared to alcohol abuse) typically implicates illegal activity, the statute draws a marked distinction between abuse of drugs and abuse of alcohol.

“Drugs” are defined as controlled substances, with reference to the Federal Controlled Substances Act. The “illegal use of drugs” is unprotected; if use of drugs would be illegal under the Controlled Substances Act, it remains unprotected under the Americans with Disabilities Act. An exception exists under the law for drugs which are used under the supervision of a healthcare professional or as otherwise authorized by federal law.

There is an uneasy treatment of marijuana, which is authorized under the laws of some states for certain medical conditions, but remains illegal under federal law. Employers are generally free to follow the mandates of federal law; most state laws relating to the medical use of marijuana are limited in what they permit and generally excuse users from state criminal laws. Some employers want to ban it entirely. Other employers want to permit marijuana for recognized therapeutic purposes. Those are permissible legal choices up to a point; most firms don’t particularly want to be seen as flouting federal law, so an uncomfortable “don’t ask don’t tell” attitude might be the result.

An employee who is “currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs” has no protection under federal law, as long as the employer acts on the basis of the illegal drug use. At issue, however, is whether the employee’s drug use is “current.” There is some circularity in the legal definition of “current” drug use. Current drug use is drug use that is current. It is a fact-based inquiry. An individual’s drug use is “current” if the facts suggest that ongoing drug use may continue to be a problem, even though the employee is not actively using, and even though the employee may not have drugs in his/her system at the time of the employer’s disciplinary decision.

The structure of the statute is intended to encourage rehabilitation. Employees who have used or are using illegal drugs can regain the protection of the statute through rehabilitation. The successful completion of a supervised rehabilitation program, together with ceasing the illegal use of drugs, restores the protection of the law. Employees can achieve rehabilitation in other ways, including participating in a supervised rehabilitation program (as compared to completing the program) so long as the illegal use of drugs stops. The law also recognizes “being otherwise” rehabilitated. That can include, for example, participation in a 12-step program or voluntary activities, so long as the illegal use of drugs ceases and so long as there have been sufficient rehabilitative activities to make it reasonable to conclude that the illegal drug use has stopped.

Under the ADA, employers have a statutory right to control employee drug use including prohibiting the illegal use of drugs in the workplace, requiring employees to remain in compliance with other statutes such as the Drug Fee Workplace Act, holding employees to the same qualification standards as non-users, complying with administrative requirements which may mandate drug testing in certain occupations, and requiring employees to submit to drug tests.

Some state statutes place limits on employer rights to conduct drug testing. Federal law is generally silent (except for those situations in which testing is mandatory—drivers, pipeline workers, train operators, coast guard, defense contractors).

Employers also have the right to prohibit alcohol use at the workplace, to require employees not to be under the influence of alcohol in connection with their work, to require employees to meet job and behavior standards regardless of alcoholism or alcohol-related conditions and to require compliance with federal standards such as Department of Transportation testing regulations.

The disparity in treatment between alcohol and illegal drugs creates employment-related issues. Although an employer can, in most circumstances, prohibit the illegal use of drugs even if off work (as long as there is some job-related connection), the same is not true with the use of alcohol.

Employers may require employees to submit to drug testing. It is not a medical examination according to federal law, and therefore can be administered without “cause” or suspicion of drug-related impairment. Alcohol tests are different and employers do not have the same right to test for alcohol. Any alcohol-related testing must be preceded by cause or suspicion of alcohol-related impairment. In the language of drug and alcohol testing, drug tests can be administered on a random basis under federal law; alcohol tests cannot be administered on a random basis.

SIGNS OF SUBSTANCE-RELATED IMPAIRMENT

Substance abuse leads to behavior problems, performance problems, or both. However, all employers need to proceed cautiously because a performance problem or a behavioral problem is not necessarily linked to a drug-related dependency or alcohol problem. Other concerns, some of them protected disabilities, could also be the cause. For example, a performance problem could be caused by personal problems at home, concerns about serious health conditions of family members, mental impairments, clinical depression, stress, fatigue, burnout, or overwork, and a host of conditions or circumstances. Many of these are protected by various state and federal laws and it is far too easy for an employer to blunder in a situation and mishandle it by making assumptions about the cause of the problem.

A cautious approach would include some, perhaps all, of the following steps:

- Establish and maintain institutional standards so that behavioral and performance problems are identified at an early opportunity.
- Identify specific performance or behavioral problems such as erratic work hours, substandard performance, observations of intoxication or impairment, unacceptable or unprofessional behavior.
• Confront the lawyer with factual information and observations, and provide an opportunity for explanation or a request for assistance.

• If appropriate, request an evaluation by a healthcare professional to determine whether there is a medical problem and, if so, what course of treatment is recommended.

• Impose appropriate requirements, including a “last chance” or “return to work” agreement.

OBTAINING AND PROTECTING MEDICAL INFORMATION

Any time a firm requires a lawyer, employee or otherwise, to participate in a medical evaluation, any communication between the firm and the healthcare professional should be preceded by a specific written authorization. The law on the content of such an authorization varies from state to state, but typically an authorization should include the description of information which is to be used or disclosed, authorization to the healthcare professional, identification of the person to whom disclosure may be made, a description of the purpose for which disclosure is authorized, some expiration date, and obviously the lawyer/patient’s signature and date of authorization. It bears emphasis that any communication with a healthcare provider should remain strictly within the boundaries of the authorization. Repeat after me: I will not talk to doctors without a written authorization. (See HIPAA release form at Appendix 23).

Regardless of whether the individual lawyer is an employee covered by the ADA or has a different status, any medical information should be retained in strictest confidence. The ADA requires medical records to be stored in separate locked cabinets, separated from personnel records and limits the persons who may have access to those records. Even if that law does not apply, however, most states recognize a right of privacy to confidential medical information. That means, at a minimum, that the persons within the firm who are aware of the medical information or medical records must restrict dissemination absent the consent of the lawyer.

COVERING THE WORK

Client needs don’t stop when a lawyer’s practice is interrupted for treatment, and somebody needs to take care of those needs if there are to be any clients to come back to. Managing re-entry to the practice starts with planning to cover client needs during treatment. You may be doing this in crisis mode, but some time to plan will pay dividends.

• What’s pending? Have somebody go through all pending matters and sort out the work so that you can identify immediate needs, near-term problems, and those matters that can wait. How you accomplish this will depend on what sort of system the lawyer uses. Check calendars, look through files, check documents on computers, and talk to clerical staff. Maybe the lawyer can prepare a list to start with, and if you’re really lucky you may be able to get a briefing memo on major matters. And don’t forget the invaluable assistance of the secretary or assistant who has been keeping the practice running. While you’re at it, you might have some great ideas about reorganizing your own calendaring system; that can probably wait a few days, but don’t lose track of the thought.

• Who’s going to do it? Once you have a list, get matters reassigned as quickly as possible. Obvious deadline work is the place to start, but don’t forget that large complicated matters need some advance warning too. It might be practical to get everything passed out in one awful meeting. Then everybody in the firm can feel terrible for an afternoon before they get down to work. While you’re pondering reassignments, consider... whether you may be able to reassign work in a way that will protect the practice for the lawyer. That maybe particularly important in organizations with a high degree of internal competition.

- Should I get extensions? Getting extensions sounds like it might solve some of the interim problems, but delaying the work may be a bad move. A month’s worth of mail stacked up, clients clamoring for attention, and major messes to clean up aren’t good for anybody. See if you can get the most critical work covered in the lawyer’s absence.

- What do I tell the clients? In general, clients do not belong to that class of people who have a need or a right to know the nature of the problem. They do, however, have a right to know that their lawyer is not going to be around for a while and not going to be handling a particular matter, and they might have strong feelings about reassignment. Before you say anything to clients, see what the lawyer wants you to say. You might be able to agree on wording that communicates the need for the absence, without damaging the lawyer’s client relationships in the bargain. If you can’t reach some agreement, you still have to tell the clients something. Consider explaining that the lawyer is on leave or on medical leave. It is very good form to ask a client whether a particular reassignment is acceptable.

CONFIDENTIALITY

The staff may know a lot more than you want, but you still need to think about what you are going to announce internally. There isn’t an easy answer for all categories, but there are some guidelines that can help work through the gray area between confidentiality and notice.

Philosophically, honesty is great. But substance abuse treatment is a confidential matter. Information about treatment should be shared only with consent or on a need to know basis. If there is an employment relationship, it may be the type of medical information protected by the law. Outside of an employment relationship, there may be civil privacy protections prohibiting the disclosure of private facts.

The first place to look for a resolution is the lawyer. Ask for input. You may be able to work out an acceptable internal statement, and you’ll never know unless you ask. It may be, however, that the lawyer does not want to start treatment with a fanfare. If you can’t agree on a statement, you may still need to notify personnel. If that happens to you, separate people into categories. You will have some who have a clear right to know (partners, for example). You will have others who have little or no right to know. And you will have others somewhere in between (the receptionist, the librarian, the mail room). Tailor your announcements accordingly, but remember to caution them not to gossip or contribute to the rumor mill. That is particularly important with the group that may be getting some detailed information. You don’t want them spreading it around after you took such pains to tailor your own announcements. You might want to avoid notifying people in writing, unless you are using a prepared statement. Memos have a way of missing the shredder and finding the light of day someplace you didn’t want them to be.

A caution is probably in order here. Lawyers entering treatment often do so having skated the surface of malpractice. As you assign out work, you may want to suggest the file be reviewed for errors or problems. That suggestion might require a bit of explanation. That category of person probably falls neatly into the “need to know” category, so don’t worry too much about explaining what the problem is, as long as you follow up with the threat that they will get warts all over their bodies if they breach confidentiality. It usually works (the threats, not the warts). The final caution, to the extent that any notification is made, consider whether you want to make it orally rather than in writing. Confidential memoranda often are not, and may find their way into the hands of people who will spread the news.

WHO PAYS FOR ALL THIS?

The cost of treatment is normally the lawyer’s responsibility, regardless of status. That does not mean that you are prohibited from contributing, paying the bill, or loaning money for treatment. Keep a few guidelines in mind as you consider expense issues, however.

- If you are going to pay this time, consider whether you are setting a precedent that you might feel compelled to follow with others. Would you have to? Perhaps, particularly if you are dealing with employees. If you pay a male’s treatment costs, you should think twice before deciding not to pay a female’s treatment costs. If you pay this year, how will you explain next year’s decision not to pay?

- It is permissible to contribute to the cost of treatment in different ways depending on status. For example, you could choose to have the firm pay for a partner but not an employee.

- It is probably more common to loan money for treatment, and set up some repayment plan. If you elect to do so, you should consider having the lawyer sign a repayment agreement and a promissory note. Most states have laws about payroll deductions, so check your state before you draft an unenforceable payroll deduction agreement.

CAN WE VISIT OR SEND CARDS AND LETTERS?

Sure, unless the lawyer does not want to hear from you. Or unless you don’t have authorization to share any information. Don’t assume that well-intentioned contacts will be appreciated.

IS OUTPLACEMENT BETTER THAN REENTRY?

Don’t automatically assume that reentry to the same practice is the best thing to do. It may not be. There may be situations in which the relationship is so fractured that treatment should be followed by outplacement into another job or career. That may be particularly appropriate if there is no work to return to.

Keep this in mind, however, when you are dealing with the lawyer who is an employee. If the organization is large enough to fall under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act, substance abuse treatment is medical care for a serious health condition, and employers are required to hold the job open. Your state may have equivalent state laws.

Partnership and shareholder agreements may also determine whether outplacement is a choice that can be imposed on the lawyer. If outplacement seems like a better idea, you might do well to involve the treatment counselors. You may unwittingly interfere with the treatment program by making a sudden unexpected change like telling the lawyer there may be no job to return to.

LAST CHANCE AGREEMENTS

In business, employers generally require employees returning from treatment to execute a “last chance agreement” or “return to work agreement.” These agreements can be a constructive part of recovery. They provide job-related motivation and outline job-related responsibilities which relate to treatment and recovery. Although they vary from workplace to workplace, most include the following elements:
• Verification that the employee is participating in a treatment program (be careful not to require too much information);
• A commitment to remain drug and alcohol⁵ free;
• An acknowledgement that the lawyer is committed to adhere to requisite standards of behavior;
• Drug or alcohol testing if appropriate (be careful to avoid random alcohol testing for employees);
• A commitment to participate fully in recommended aftercare, 12-step meetings, or other therapy recommended by treatment counselors;
• An acknowledgement that a violation of the agreement, or its incorporated standards, will result in immediate termination; and
• Authorization to talk to treatment counselors to obtain information about compliance with treatment requirements, aftercare conditions, and to get advice about the return to work, all limited to a need to know basis and carefully drafted to protect medical privacy.

“Last chance” or “return to work” agreements are appropriate for the lawyer too; however the type of agreement might vary with the lawyer’s status. Partners and shareholders who have ownership interests may work under agreements that spell out rights and responsibilities that leave little room for a mandatory extra agreement such as a last chance agreement. That may leave the firm with little leverage beyond a motion to expel the lawyer or break up the firm. But don’t overlook the value of negotiation too. You may be able to work out a perfectly satisfactory return to work agreement which protects organizational interests and, in exchange, offers practice-related assistance upon return.

THE WELCOME HOME

It is a good idea to designate a single person or a small group to be the lawyer’s designated contacts during treatment. That will ensure a more consistent flow of information about progress, prognosis, return dates and similar details. It will also help avoid a minor catastrophe upon return: the lawyer walks in, wholly unexpected, to find someone working at his/her desk, secretary reassigned, no clients, no work, and no friends. That doesn’t have to happen; the contact person can be responsible to see it doesn’t.

Organizations must give some thought to the lawyer’s return to the office:
• Check out the physical space and make sure you return it to pre-treatment condition (but ditch the bottles!).⁶

⁵ Before requiring a commitment to remain alcohol free, check with developing interpretations of the Americans with Disabilities Act. While current use of illegal drugs is not protected under the law, alcoholism is as long as it does not have a negative effect on the business operations. That may lead to a tension between the need to abstain from alcohol for purposes of treatment and recovery, and the employer’s insufficient interest in monitoring off-the-job drinking habits. We don’t yet know where the line lies.

⁶ Actually, if the organization’s culture respects the privacy of desks and offices, don’t go searching for bottles or drug paraphernalia. Let the lawyer or a sponsor take that project on.
Some kind of welcoming activity is appropriate, but take personalities and desires into account. Maybe a brief acknowledgement at a breakfast meeting is in order, maybe a card, or some other recognition. Treatment counselors are often very good sources to tap if you’re concerned about what’s appropriate.

At least a week before the lawyer’s scheduled return, two work related things should be happening. First, the lawyers who were assigned the pending matters should prepare brief status reports on what was done in the lawyer’s absence. Second, the appropriate person (practice chair, managing partner, and supervisor) must give some thought to the work the lawyer will be doing upon return. Employees need assignments; partners or shareholders may need guidance. A visit with treatment counselors may help out here provided you have consent.

Don’t neglect the other lawyers in the practice. Some of them will have a right and a need to have some information about the return. You will also need to manage their expectations about the return. Maybe the lawyer will return gung-ho, ready to dive into an intense three month project. More likely he/she will return to a wounded practice and some resentful colleagues.

BASIC LAWYER SKILLS

There may be a lot of surprises upon the lawyer’s return. Alcohol or drug use can mask many other problems, and may have contributed to a false impression of the lawyer’s skills. The lawyer may have forgotten—or never learned—good skills. That may include work skills—effective research, analysis, advocacy, effective oral and written presentation skills—and it may include “office” skills—billing practices, client relationships, office relationships. Be on the lookout for this problem. It can be corrected, but not if you don’t know about it.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE PRACTICE?

You can bet the rent on this: you are welcoming back a lawyer with a sick practice. If you want reentry to work, you have to work on the practice. Every sick practice is sick in its own way, and there are no universal solutions.

The returning lawyer is probably not able to do much alone. More likely he/she will be at a loss to know what happened to the practice, let alone how to fix it.

Controlled assignments or responsibilities for six to twelve months may be needed, first to provide some work, then later to fill in gaps as the practice rebuilds.

Most lawyers returning from treatment will benefit from practice building advice and some wise counsel – from a department head, knowledgeable peer, or even an outside consultant.

Don’t underestimate the value of jump starting. Early successes are very important motivators.

Have a short-term and near-term practice development plan; give some thought to it before the lawyer returns, and make it a key point of discussion the first few days back on the job.

Monitor progress against the plan, particularly during the first six months.

All this takes commitment, which raises another concern. Sick practices don’t get that way overnight. More likely, others have carried their impaired colleague just a little too long.
RESENTMENT, MISTRUST AND THE OTHER UNHOLY EMOTIONS

Most lawyers do not analyze their own practices, but they often can’t stop themselves from analyzing the practice of their colleague who has just returned from treatment. It isn’t difficult to understand why the dominant emotion is resentment. One of their own has failed them. They may be cleaning up, mending shattered client relationships, worrying about staff complaints and rebuilding a tarnished firm reputation. They may be the ones giving up vacations and weekends to get the work done in the lawyer’s absence. They may even be paying for treatment, in one way or another. They may be struggling with their own practices, but not getting the same care and attention the returning Prodigal Son is getting. They may be looking for a reason to believe the lawyer should go someplace else to make a fresh start.

Reentry to the same firm is not always the best choice, although it may sometimes be required because of a controlling statute. If you are looking for the greatest good for the greatest number of people, an honorable goal, you will understand that the interests of the group are at least as important as those of the returning lawyer (and there are usually more of them). Give this some time. The tension may fade, but it is unlikely you’ll be able to predict whether it will. But don’t count on time alone to make this work. The lawyer in an average organization knows very little about the complexities of drug and alcohol abuse. If you sense tension, it might be helpful to provide some education to the lawyers in the organization so they can understand more about addiction, and maybe learn something about repairing relationships themselves.

Regaining credibility is a critical task for the impaired lawyer. Remember that a part of credibility is what others see. If the senior or “important” lawyers in the firm wash their hands of the returning lawyer, everybody else will too. On the other hand, a little public attention from the right people can make the difference.

SAMPLE: TREATMENT AND RETURN TO WORK AGREEMENT

By signing this agreement I accept and agree to the following terms and conditions which will govern my continued employment with and my return to work with [firm].

I. TREATMENT

1. I acknowledge that my work performance and/or behavior have resulted in the need for intervention and have provided a basis for the termination of my employment (or: define nature of relationship) with the firm. As a consequence, and in order to avoid the termination of my employment (expulsion from the firm), I voluntarily accept the terms of this agreement.

2. I agree to submit to an immediate evaluation by a health care professional of the firm’s selection.

3. I will follow all treatment recommendations of that professional including without limitation entry into a residential treatment program.

4. I understand that I am responsible for all costs associated with the treatment program to the extent they are not covered by insurance.

5. I will authorize regular progress reports to be made to the firm during treatment (tailor to specific consent).

II. RETURN TO WORK
1. Upon completion of the recommended treatment program I understand that the firm will return me to employment.

2. Upon my return, I will review all aftercare requirements and recommendations with my supervisor (on a need-to-know basis).

3. I understand and acknowledge that my return to work will be conditioned upon my strict compliance with the following:

   (a) Strict compliance with the treatment recommendations made by the treatment professionals with whom I have been working. Upon completion of my treatment program, a summary of those recommendations will be prepared and attached as Exhibit A to this agreement, and I will re-execute it at that time (tailor consistent with medical authorization);

   (b) Complete abstention from all mood-altering substances except in strict accordance with the written authorization of a licensed physician who has been advised in advance of my treatment for substance abuse and who has reviewed any such prescription in advance with my substance abuse counselors (tailor to address off-duty alcohol use);

   (c) Regular attendance at required or recommended 12-step programs.

4. For a period of two years from the date of my return to work, I agree to submit to testing to detect the presence or use of drugs (or alcohol if appropriate), on any basis including random or unannounced, and at the times and on the terms that are communicated to me by [insert authorized person or entity]. I understand that at the conclusion of the two year period the company, in its sole discretion, may extend the period during which I will submit to drug testing for an additional year. (Use caution in defining alcohol testing to avoid ADA problems)

5. I understand and acknowledge that I continue to be bound by and must adhere to all standards of professionalism, behavior and performance that are required of attorneys with the firm as they may exist from time to time, including but not limited to those set out in the firm’s policy and procedure manual.

6. This agreement does not guarantee my employment or compensation for any period of time, nor does it in any way alter my status [as an at will employee]. I understand and acknowledge that strict adherence to these terms and conditions is a requirement of my continued employment with the firm and that any violation of the terms of this agreement (including its incorporated standards) will result in my immediate termination.

By my signature below I confirm that I have reviewed and considered these terms and accept them voluntarily as a constructive part of my recovery. I also acknowledge that these terms are being provided to me as an alternate to the termination of my employment. I understand that I may withdraw my consent at any time during the term of this agreement, but acknowledge that withdrawing my consent is a voluntary termination of my employment (consent to my expulsion from the firm).

APPENDIX 16

NEW YORK HUMAN RIGHTS LAW

The New York Human Rights Law prohibits employment discrimination based on disability. New York Executive Law § 296(1)(a). Alcoholism is considered a protected disability, so an alcoholic cannot be discriminated against solely because of that condition. The current use of illegal drugs is not a protected disability and is not protected by this law. However, one who is a recovered drug addict is protected against employment discrimination based on that status.

Even though alcoholism is a protected disability, an employer is not prohibited from taking action against an alcoholic employee if this condition affects the person’s job performance. An employer is permitted to discipline or terminate an employee whose alcoholism results in poor attendance or inability to perform job duties. For example, a hospital prevailed in a disability discrimination action brought by its former chief of internal medicine who was terminated because his alcoholism prevented him from performing his duties in a reasonable manner. Altman v. New York City Health & Hospitals Corp., 100 F.3d 1054 (2d Cir. 1996). The Court observed that it was proper for the hospital to hold him to the same performance and behavior standards as other employees, even though he was disabled.

The Human Rights Law generally requires employers to provide reasonable accommodation for a disabled employee. New York Executive Law § 296. Regulations adopted by the Division of Human Rights require an employer consider providing adjustments to the work schedule to allow for ongoing treatment for a recovered/recovering alcoholic or drug addict. 9 N.Y.C.R.R. § 466.11(h)(2). This particular accommodation is not an absolute requirement, but should be considered by an employer.

The determination of what type of accommodation is reasonable in a particular case is based on many factors, including the size of the employer. Employers are required to engage in an “interactive process” with a disabled employee in an effort to find a reasonable accommodation.

FAQs RE DOCUMENT DESTRUCTION AND PRESERVATION

Question: How long does a lawyer or law firm have to keep closed files?
Answer: Lawyers and law firms have to keep different files and documents for different periods of time. For example, the New York Rules of Professional Conduct require lawyers to keep escrow, trust and operating account bank records for seven years. See Rule 1.15(d)(1).

Rule 1.15(d) also requires lawyers to keep for seven years copies of all retainer and compensation agreements with clients, client bills, all “records showing payments to lawyers, investigators or other persons, not in the lawyer’s regular employ, for services rendered or performed,” as well as copies of all retainer and closing statements filed with the Office of Court Administration.

Court Rules in the First and Second Departments require attorneys for plaintiffs and defendants in personal injury actions to preserve virtually the entire file for seven years after the settlement or discontinuance of the action. See 22 N.Y.C.R.R. §§ 603.7(f) and 691.20(f).

Lawyers must maintain original client documents such as wills and trusts or return them to the clients for safekeeping. It is advisable to maintain files in most criminal cases indefinitely, as the need for such files can arise decades later. The same can be said for files in transactional matters and other areas of practice. In contrast, most litigation files need not be maintained for more than three years after the litigation is concluded or the representation of the client terminated, whichever is later (except for personal injury files in the First and Second Departments, which must be kept for seven years). The best practice is to adopt and adhere to a document retention policy and to advise clients of the policy.

Question: What bank records are covered by Rule 1.15(d)?
Answer: A lawyer or law firm should keep all monthly statements, cancelled checks, deposit slips, check books, check stubs, ledgers and reconciliation statements for all special, trust, IOLA and escrow accounts, as well as for all operating accounts. As a precaution, a lawyer or law firm should maintain such records for any other fiduciary account the lawyer or firm maintains. These records may be kept in paper or electronic formats. See NYSBA Ethics Opinion 940 (2012) (examining use of electronic tape back-up systems, cloud storage systems and legal obligations of attorneys to preserve certain documents in original form). See also NYC Bar Formal Op. 2008-1 (re a lawyer’s obligation to retain electronic documents).

Question: What records do I have to keep for conflicts checking purposes?
Answer: The Rules of Professional Conduct require law firms to maintain a “conflicts check system” and “written records of its engagements.” See Rule 1.10(e). Rule 1.10(e) identifies four situations in which lawyers must check for conflicts: (1) the firm agrees to represent a new client; (2) the firm agrees to represent an existing client in a new matter; (3) the firm hires or associates with another lawyer; or (4) an additional party is named or appears in a pending matter. Lawyers and law firms... should keep enough information about client matters (open and closed) to determine, for example, whether they can represent a new client against a former client or concurrent clients with “differing interests.” Lawyers considering a new representation need to be able to determine whether it is “substantially related” to a prior representation. It is advisable to keep the firm’s client database (whether that is maintained on index cards or electronically) up to date, with complete information about client identity (including related entities) and the nature of the matter for which the lawyer or law firm was retained. These records must be maintained for as long as the lawyer is in practice or the law firm (or its successors) in business. After all, conflicts may follow lawyers from firm to firm and there is no fixed period for maintaining the information. Thus, a prudent lawyer should maintain it for as long as necessary, namely, as long as the lawyer is in practice. For guidance on former client conflicts, see Rule 1.9.

Question: Can a lawyer simply have a document destruction policy and get rid of all closed files after six months?

Answer: The answer is probably not. Six months sounds like much too short a time frame. The statute of limitations for legal malpractice actions is three years and it can be tolled by continuing representation of a client, even on unrelated matters. There is no statute of limitations for disciplinary complaints, which can be filed many years after a case is over. Except when otherwise required by rule or statute, it is wise to keep most client files for at least six years. There are additional considerations. Lawyers should not destroy documents that may be necessary for the representation of a client in the future or documents that have not been given to the client, but which the client could “reasonably expect that the lawyer will preserve.” Attorneys are obliged to preserve electronic documents and email in many situations and certainly should not destroy client files before notifying the client. In Sage Realty Corp., et al. v. Proskauer Rose Goetz & Mendelsohn, LLP, 91 N.Y.2d 30, 666 N.Y.S.2d 985 (1997), the Court of Appeals held that the client was entitled to the entire file, except for internal law firm documents. Law firms should give clients an opportunity to pick up their files before destroying them. Helpful guidance can be found in NYSBA Opinion 623 (1991) and NYSBA Opinion 460 (1977). See also NYSBA Opinion 766 (2003) (“Former client and/or successor counsel is presumptively entitled to access all attorney files”); NYCBAR 2010-1 (attorneys may put provision in engagement letter specifying handling of client’s file at conclusion of matter, but “attorney must take reasonable steps to preserve all documents that she has an obligation to retain or return to the client”).

Question: What about old original wills? Can those just be thrown out on the reasonable assumption that they are no longer needed because the clients have died or found new counsel?

Answer: No, if a lawyer or law firm has retained original wills, they must be preserved or returned to the testators for safekeeping. Lawyers who retain original wills should make arrangements for someone else to safeguard them after they retire or cease practicing. Of course, it is impossible to return old wills to persons known or presumed to be deceased. Consider filing the wills in the local Surrogate’s court. Note there is a filing fee of $45, though the court may reduce or dispense with the fee. Get informed about common practices in your region. Some County Bar Associations offer will registries which may be useful. Another law office may be willing to retain the wills of a deceased or retired attorney. Like wills, certain contracts, property deeds, trust instruments and other documents that a client might need to establish “substantial personal or property rights,” or other original documents like birth and marriage certificates and passports, must be returned to the client or safeguarded by the lawyer. Failure to do so can result in professional discipline for failure to safeguard a client’s property or damages for breach of fiduciary duty. (See Rule 1.15(c); NYSBA Opinion 940 (2012) (examining use of electronic tape back-up systems, cloud storage systems and legal obligations of attorneys to preserve certain documents in original form); NYCBAR Formal Opinion 2010-1 (examining lawyer’s obligation to retain client files).

Question: Is there anything else that a lawyer or law firm should consider in designing a document retention program or policy?

Answer: Yes. First, no documents or files should be discarded if they might be necessary to the firm’s defense of its own conduct or its handling of a matter. A firm should be particularly careful not to destroy documents that show that the firm committed malpractice or violated the ethics rules. Second, it is very important that client confidentiality be preserved during any document or file destruction. Shredding is advisable, since anything else may lead to disclosure of client confidences or secrets and liability for the firm. Similar caution should be used when computer equipment is replaced. No computer should be disposed of before the hard drive has been carefully erased, scrubbed or shredded, which can be accomplished simply by using available software programs. Just deleting files and documents won’t do, since a person with sufficient computer expertise can retrieve most of those files and documents with a “restore” function. Expert advice is strongly recommended.

SELECTED EXCERPTS FROM THE CPLR AND JUDICIARY LAW

CPLR 321. Attorney withdrawal

(b) Change or withdrawal of attorney

1. Unless the party is a person specified in section 1201, an attorney of record may be changed, by filing with the clerk a consent to the change signed by the retiring attorney and signed and acknowledged by the party. Notice of such change of attorney shall be given to the attorneys for all parties in the action or, if a party appears without an attorney, to the party.

2. An attorney of record may withdraw or be changed by order of the court in which the action is pending, upon motion on such notice to the client of the withdrawing attorney, to the attorneys of all other parties in the action or, if a party appears without an attorney, to the party, and to any other person, as the court may direct.

(c) Death, removal or disability of attorney. If an attorney dies, becomes physically or mentally incapacitated, or is removed, suspended or otherwise becomes disabled at any time before judgment, no further proceeding shall be taken in the action against the party for whom he appeared, without leave of the court, until thirty days after notice to appoint another attorney has been served upon that party either personally or in such manner as the court directs.

CPLR 4503. Attorney-client privilege

(a) 1. Confidential communication privileged. Unless the client waives the privilege, an attorney or his or her employee, or any person who obtains without the knowledge of the client evidence of a confidential communication made between the attorney or his or her employee and the client in the course of professional employment, shall not disclose, or be allowed to disclose such communication, nor shall the client be compelled to disclose such communication, in any action, disciplinary trial or hearing, or administrative action, proceeding or hearing conducted by or on behalf of any state, municipal or local governmental agency or by the legislature or any committee or body thereof. Evidence of any such communication obtained by any such person, and evidence resulting therefrom, shall not be disclosed by any state, municipal or local governmental agency or by the legislature or any committee or body thereof. The relationship of an attorney and client shall exist between a professional service corporation organized under article fifteen of the business corporation law to practice as an attorney and counselor-at-law and the clients to whom it renders legal services.

CPLR 5514. Extension of time to take appeal or to move for permission to appeal

(b) Disability of attorney. If the attorney for an aggrieved party dies, is removed or suspended, or becomes physically or mentally incapacitated or otherwise disabled before the expiration of the time limited for taking an appeal or moving for permission to appeal without having done so, such appeal may be taken or such motion for permission to appeal may be served within sixty days from the date of death, removal or suspension, or commencement of such incapacity or disability.
(c) Other extensions of time; substitutions or omissions. No extension of time shall be granted for taking an appeal or for moving for permission to appeal except as provided in this section, section 1022, or section 5520.

Judiciary Law § 468-a. Biennial registration of attorneys

4. The biennial registration fee shall be three hundred seventy-five dollars, sixty dollars of which shall be allocated to and be deposited in a fund established pursuant to the provisions of section ninety-seven-t of the state finance law, fifty dollars of which shall be allocated to and shall be deposited in a fund established pursuant to the provisions of section ninety-eight-b of the state finance law, twenty-five dollars of which shall be allocated to be deposited in a fund established pursuant to the provisions of section ninety-eight-c of the state finance law, and the remainder of which shall be deposited in the attorney licensing fund. Such fee shall be required of every attorney who is admitted and licensed to practice law in this state, whether or not the attorney is engaged in the practice of law in this state or elsewhere, except attorneys who certify to the chief administrator of the courts that they have retired from the practice of law.

5. Noncompliance by an attorney with the provisions of this section and the rules promulgated hereunder shall constitute conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice and shall be referred to the appropriate appellate division of the supreme court for disciplinary action.

Judiciary Law § 499. Lawyer assistance committees

1. Confidential information privileged. The confidential relations and communications between a member or authorized agent of a lawyer assistance committee sponsored by a state or local bar association and any person, firm or corporation communicating with such committee, its members or authorized agents shall be deemed to be privileged on the same basis as those provided by law between attorney and client. Such privilege may be waived only by the person, firm or corporation which has furnished information to the committee.

2. Immunity from liability. Any person, firm or corporation in good faith providing information to, or in any other way participating in the affairs of, any of the committees referred to in subdivision one of this section shall be immune from civil liability that might otherwise result by reason of such conduct. For the purpose of any proceeding, the good faith of any such person, firm or corporation shall be presumed.

22 N.Y.C.R.R. § 118.1. Filing Requirement

(g) Each registration statement filed pursuant to this section shall be accompanied by a registration fee of $375. No fee shall be required from an attorney who certifies that he or she has retired from the practice of law. For purposes of this section, the “practice of law” shall mean the giving of legal advice or counsel to, or providing legal representation for, particular body or individual in a particular situation in either the public or private sector in the State of New York or elsewhere, it shall include the appearance as an attorney before any court or administrative agency. An attorney is “retired” from the practice of law when, other than the performance of legal services without compensation, he or she does not practice law in any respect and does not intend ever to engage in acts that constitute the practice of law. For purposes of section 468-a of the Judiciary Law, a full-time judge or justice of the Unified Court System of the State of New York, or of a court of any other state or of a Federal court, shall be deemed “retired” from the practice of law. An attorney in good standing, at least 55 years old and with at least 10 years experience, who participates without compensation in an approved pro bono legal services program, may enroll as an “attorney emeritus.”
(h) Failure by any attorney to comply with the provisions of this section shall result in referral for disciplinary action by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court pursuant to section 90 of the Judiciary Law.

Rule 1.6. Confidentiality of Information

(a) A lawyer shall not knowingly reveal confidential information, as defined in this Rule, or use such information to the disadvantage of a client or for the advantage of the lawyer or a third person, unless:

(1) the client gives informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(j);

(2) the disclosure is impliedly authorized to advance the best interests of the client and is either reasonable under the circumstances or customary in the professional community; or

(3) the disclosure is permitted by paragraph (b).

“Confidential information” consists of information gained during or relating to the representation of a client, whatever its source, that is (a) protected by the attorney-client privilege, (b) likely to be embarrassing or detrimental to the client if disclosed, or (c) information that the client has requested be kept confidential. “Confidential information” does not ordinarily include (i) a lawyer's legal knowledge or legal research or (ii) information that is generally known in the local community or in the trade, field or profession to which the information relates.

(b) A lawyer may reveal or use confidential information to the extent that the lawyer reasonably believes necessary:

(1) to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm;

(2) to prevent the client from committing a crime;

(3) to withdraw a written or oral opinion or representation previously given by the lawyer and reasonably believed by the lawyer still to be relied upon by a third person, where the lawyer has discovered that the opinion or representation was based on materially inaccurate information or is being used to further a crime or fraud;

(4) to secure legal advice about compliance with these Rules or other law by the lawyer, another lawyer associated with the lawyer's firm or the law firm;

(5) (i) to defend the lawyer or the lawyer's employees and associates against an accusation of wrongful conduct; or

(ii) to establish or collect a fee; or

(6) when permitted or required under these Rules or to comply with other law or court order.

(c) A lawyer shall exercise reasonable care to prevent the lawyer's employees, associates, and others whose services are utilized by the lawyer from disclosing or using confidential information of a client, except that a lawyer may reveal the information permitted to be disclosed by paragraph (b) through an employee.
Rule 1.16. Declining or Terminating Representation

(a) A lawyer shall not accept employment on behalf of a person if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that such person wishes to:

1. bring a legal action, conduct a defense, or assert a position in a matter, or otherwise have steps taken for such person, merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person; or

2. present a claim or defense in a matter that is not warranted under existing law, unless it can be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

(b) Except as stated in paragraph (d), a lawyer shall withdraw from the representation of a client when:

1. the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the representation will result in a violation of these Rules or of law;

2. the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client;

3. the lawyer is discharged; or

4. the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the client is bringing the legal action, conducting the defense, or asserting a position in the matter, or is otherwise having steps taken, merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person.

(c) Except as stated in paragraph (d), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client when:

1. withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;

2. the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer's services that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent;

3. the client has used the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;

4. the client insists upon taking action with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement;

5. the client deliberately disregards an agreement or obligation to the lawyer as to expenses or fees;

6. the client insists upon presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law;

7. the client fails to cooperate in the representation or otherwise renders the representation unreasonably difficult for the lawyer to carry out employment effectively;

8. the lawyer's inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the best interest of the client likely will be served by withdrawal;
the lawyer’s mental or physical condition renders it difficult for the lawyer to carry out the representation effectively;

(10) the client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the employment;

(11) withdrawal is permitted under Rule 1.13(c) or other law;

(12) the lawyer believes in good faith, in a matter pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal; or

(13) the client insists that the lawyer pursue a course of conduct which is illegal or prohibited under these Rules.

(d) If permission for withdrawal from employment is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment in a matter before that tribunal without its permission. When ordered to do so by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.

(e) Even when withdrawal is otherwise permitted or required, upon termination of representation, a lawyer shall take steps, to the extent reasonably practicable, to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the client, including giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, delivering to the client all papers and property to which the client is entitled, promptly refunding any part of a fee paid in advance that has not been earned and complying with applicable laws and rules.

22 N.Y.C.R.R. § 1500.5. Waivers, Modifications and Exemptions

(b) Exemptions. The following persons shall be exempt from the requirements of New York’s continuing legal education program:

(4) Attorneys who certify that they are retired from the practice of law pursuant to § 468-a of the Judiciary Law.

SELECTED ETHICS OPINIONS

New York State Bar Association Committee on Professional Ethics

Opinion #341 (1974) Notice to clients whose wills lawyer holds at retirement.
Opinion #460 (1977) Preservation of closed files.
Opinion #521 (1980) Wills; contact with executor, beneficiaries.
Opinion #531 (1981) Duty to report violation of Disciplinary Rule; communication to member of rehabilitative committee.
Opinion #622 (1991) Firm name; deceased partner; successor firm.
Opinion #623 (1991) Closed files; disposition procedures; dissolution of law firm.
Opinion #641 (1993) Lawyer must comply with recycling ordinance in such a way as to protect confidentiality of client information.
Opinion #680 (1996) Record retention by electronic means digest: lawyers may retain some records in the form of computer images, but certain records must be retained in original form.
Opinion #715 (1999) Conflict of interest; sub-contractor to multiple law firms.
Opinion #724 (1999) Wills; obligations of law firm in regard to wills in its custody.
Opinion #734 (2000) Attorney’s obligation to report to a client a significant error or omission that may give rise to a possible malpractice claim.
Opinion #758 (2002) Required trust account documents should be retained as paper copies where available to lawyer in the ordinary course of business; otherwise, these documents may be retained in electronic form.
Opinion #766 (2003) Former client and/or successor counsel presumptively entitled to access all attorney files.
Opinion #775 (2004) When possibly incapacitated former client asks lawyer to return client’s original will, lawyer may communicate with former client and others to ascertain former client’s condition and wishes.
Opinion #780 (2004) Generally proper for lawyer to retain copies of client’s file; proper to require a release of malpractice liability as a condition of returning the file without retaining copies.
Opinion #793 (2006)  Except for personal conflicts, conflicts imputed to attorney will also be imputed to all lawyers in any firm with which the attorney has an of counsel relationship; where two firms share an of counsel relationship, conflicts of one firm will be imputed to the other.

Opinion #831 (2009)  Where a lawyer learns that a client, before April 1, 2009 (the effective date of the new Rules of Professional Conduct), had committed fraud on a tribunal, lawyer’s obligation to disclose the fraud is governed by DR 7-102(B)(1) of former Code of Professional Responsibility, which generally did not permit disclosure of confidences or secrets, and not by rule 3.3 of the new Rules of Professional Conduct, which may require disclosure of confidential information necessary to remedy the fraud. Where the fraud occurred before April 1, 2009, this conclusion applies whether the lawyer learns of the fraud before or after April 1, 2009.

Opinion #850 (2011)  A law firm may not use the name of a former partner in the firm name if the former continues to practice law elsewhere.

Opinion #854 (2011)  Lawyer who was employed by another lawyer must report knowledge of former employer’s violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if the violation raises a substantial question about employer’s honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness as a lawyer and if the report does not disclose confidential information. If former employee lacks knowledge, he may report good faith belief or suspicion of former employer’s professional misconduct to an appropriate authority if the report does not disclose confidential information, but may not communicate that belief or suspicion to the employer’s clients.

Opinion #865 (2011)  Lawyer who prepared estate plan for decedent may represent executor despite recent change in law of legal malpractice in Estate of Schneider v. Finmann (N.Y. 2010) provided that lawyer does not perceive a colorable claim of legal malpractice arising out of the estate planning.

Opinion #907 (2012)  Attorney may agree to make anonymous donation on behalf of client, and must protect the confidentiality of the identity of a client when asked by the client to do so, provided the request does not involve the lawyer in prohibited conduct.

Opinion #936 (2012)  Whether a law firm may designate a departing name partner as “Special Counsel” after removing his name from the firm name depends on the level of his continuing involvement with the firm and its clients.

Opinion #940 (2012)  Lawyer may store confidential information on off-site backup tapes if lawyer takes reasonable care to ensure adequacy of systems to protect confidentiality. When records must be retained, nature of the records determines whether lawyer (i) must maintain originals, (ii) may discard originals and maintain electronic copies in particular formats, or (iii) may maintain electronic copies in any format.

Opinion #954 (2013)  A firm's offering of succession/contingent planning services to other lawyers is neither an “advertisement” nor “solicitation” under the Rules. One attorney’s agreement to refer a matter to another attorney in the event of becoming unable to practice, would not create an association between the two attorneys for purposes of the fee-sharing rule either at the time such agreement is executed or triggered, unless and until the amount of work being transitioned to the second attorney becomes significant.
Opinion #961 (2013) A retiring lawyer may sell a law practice contingent on receipt of future fees, under certain conditions.

Opinion #970 (2013) If executrix of decedent’s estate who seeks files possessed by the decedent’s former attorney is legally entitled to the files that decedent had when alive, then former attorney should ordinarily provide the executrix access to all those files. If, on the other hand, her status as executrix does not confer on her the same legal right as the decedent possessed, then the contents of deceased client’s file will generally not be disclosable to the executrix unless (1) the information disclosed is not “confidential information” or (2) the lawyer has grounds to conclude that release of the information is impliedly authorized.

Opinion #982 (2013) A lawyer who has not appeared before a tribunal has no duty and no right to disclose confidential information protected by Rule 1.6 even if necessary to correct a prior false statement by the lawyer, made to opposing counsel before any proceeding began, which may be later used as evidence before the tribunal.

Opinion #1002 (2014) Lawyer appointed as executor to estate of deceased lawyer who had custody of client and non-client wills may access and disclose confidential information in the wills insofar as necessary to learn identity of testator, executor, or beneficiaries in order to dispose of wills properly.

Opinion #1008 (2014) Whether a law firm may represent new clients against an entity that the law firm has represented in the past depends on whether the entity is a current or former client, which is a mixed question of fact and law. A law firm may not oppose a current client in any matter, related or unrelated, absent the current client’s informed consent, confirmed in writing. However, a law firm may oppose a former client in any matter that is not substantially related to the firm’s legal work for that former client. Even if the entity is no longer a client, a law firm has a continuing duty to protect confidential information of that entity.

Opinion #1030 (2014) If a law firm with a new name partner is either the same firm (with a new name) or a legal successor to the business and property of the original firm, and the firm (i) makes all necessary corporate filings, and (ii) takes all steps with the bank that maintains its trust account necessary to reflect any changes taking place under the Business Corporation Law and the firm’s constituent documents, then the firm may (1) continue to use its old letterhead while the remaining stock is being depleted and (2) continue to use the trust account and the checks used to draw upon it (although it would be desirable to indicate the change in firm name on the old checks).

Opinion #1035 (2014) A lawyer who comes into possession of an original will by acquiring the practice of a retiring lawyer must take reasonable steps to locate and notify the testator or others with an interest in the will. The lawyer may review or disclose confidential information from the will as necessary for its appropriate disposition, and may file the original will with the local surrogate’s court.
The Association of the Bar of the City of New York Committee on Professional and Judicial Ethics

Opinion #1993-01 Assignment by retired attorney of accounts receivable to another attorney.

Opinion #1999-04 Law firm mergers.

Opinion #1999-05 Lawyer’s obligations regarding disposition of original wills held for safekeeping where the testator cannot be located and the lawyer is retiring or the firm is dissolving.

Opinion #2005-06 Attorneys who are retired from the practice of law (a) may use professional letterhead; (b) may, but are not required to, disclose on that letterhead that they are retired; and (c) are not obligated to specially disclose to clients or prospective clients that they (i) may not charge a fee or (ii) are exempt from the CLE requirements that are mandatory for all other New York attorneys.

Opinion #2010-1 Retainer agreements and engagement letters may authorize lawyer at the conclusion of matter or engagement to return all client documents to the client or to discard such documents, subject to certain exceptions.

Opinion #2011-1 Absent consent of successor counsel, a lawyer may not contact a former client known to be represented by counsel to discuss matters within the scope of the successor counsel’s representation.

Opinion #2013-2 When counsel learns that material evidence offered by the lawyer, the lawyer’s client or a witness called by a lawyer during a now-concluded civil or criminal proceeding was false, whether intentionally or due to mistake, the lawyer is obligated, under Rule 3.3(a)(3), to take “reasonable remedial measures,” which includes disclosing the false evidence to the tribunal to which the evidence was presented as long as it is still possible to reopen the proceeding based on this disclosure, or disclosing the false evidence to opposing counsel where another tribunal could amend, modify or vacate the prior judgment.

New York County Lawyers’ Association Committee on Professional Ethics

Opinion #709 (1995) Partners and legal representatives of deceased attorney; duty to notify clients; lawyer as fiduciary in will.

Opinion #728 (1999) Publicity; Partner withdrawal from firm partnership.

Opinion #742 (2010) Ghost writing: “Given New York’s adoption of Rule 1.2(c) and the allowance of limited scope representation, it is now ethically permissible for an attorney, with the informed consent of his or her client, to play a limited role and prepare pleadings and other submissions for a pro se litigant without disclosing the lawyer’s participation to the tribunal and adverse counsel.”
Nassau County Bar Association Ethics Opinions

Opinion #81-10  Recommended procedure for attorneys, for the management of files on closed matters.

Opinion #88-49  Payment of referral fees to estate of deceased employer and to attorney who referred cases to that attorney before his death.

Opinion #89-23  Maintenance by “guardian” attorney of deceased attorney’s files on closed matters.

Opinion #89-43  Custodian attorney’s release of files to client of deceased attorney.

Opinion #90-14  Sharing fee with attorney who has resigned.

Opinion #91-35  Disclosure of amount charged to clients and other information about clients.

Opinion #92-27  Maintenance by “guardian” attorney of deceased attorney’s files on closed matters.

Opinion #93-23  Obligations of successor-firm attorneys with respect to inactive files on matter handled by law firm, now in dissolution, for clients of withdrawing partners: ethical obligations with respect to the inactive files are joint and several as to the former partners of the law firm, notwithstanding the dissolution.

Opinion #95-9  A lawyer who seeks to withdraw from cases in litigation in anticipation of retiring from the active practice of law must take steps to avoid prejudicing the rights of the lawyer’s clients. Where the lawyer is attorney of record before a tribunal, then the lawyer must seek permission to withdraw, if the tribunal requires it. Upon withdrawing the lawyer must promptly refund any part of an advance fee that is unearned.

Opinion #06-02  Lawyer may not charge for storage of materials in client’s file that lawyer is obligated to retain after completion of representation, but lawyer may charge a reasonable fee for storage of other materials. The fee must be disclosed and agreed to in writing by the client prior to billing.

Erie County Bar Association

Opinion #10-08  A lawyer’s file includes all electronic and paper documents. The client is entitled to the entire file, except for certain internal documents. The cost of producing the electronic file is generally to be borne by the client.

Opinion #10-06  A lawyer should retain records in accordance with the instructions of the client, the Rules of Prof. Conduct and any other applicable rules or laws.

Opinion #10-01  The use of a retired partner’s name in a law firm name is ethically permissible if it is not misleading.

Opinion #11-06  Attorney closing an IOLA account must return funds to entitled parties; IOLA Fund receives any interest on the account; Lawyers’ Fund for Client Protection receives unaccounted for or unclaimed funds; lawyer or successor must maintain records of the account for seven years.

Opinion #12-01 A lawyer may ethically practice law with more than one law firm, but will need to apply the conflict results as if there was one firm.

Opinion #13-01 A lawyer may not represent another person in a matter where the lawyer has formerly represented a client in a substantially related matter unless the former client provides written informed consent.

Opinion #13-04 At the former client’s request, a lawyer must turn over the files, including executed wills, to the former client’s new attorney, unless the attorney believes the client has diminished capacity. The lawyer may disclose non-confidential information about the former client to the new attorney, but may not disclose confidential information about the former client’s caretaker, who was also a previous client of the lawyer.

American Bar Association Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility

Opinion #327 (1971) A law firm may, in accordance with a pre-existing retirement plan, pay to a retired partner, or for a fixed period to the estate of a deceased partner, an amount measured by earnings accrued after the retirement or death of the partner.

Opinion #468 (2014) When a lawyer or law firm sells a law practice or an area of law practice under Rule 1.17, the seller must cease to engage in the private practice of law, or in the area of practice that has been sold, in the relevant jurisdiction or geographic area. But the selling lawyer or law firm may assist the buyer or buyers in the orderly transition of active client matters for a reasonable period after the closing of the sale. Neither the selling lawyer or law firm nor the purchasing lawyer or law firm may bill clients for time spent only on the transition of matters.

TEN THINGS NOT TO DO WHEN YOU RETIRE

By David Kee

I. DON’T RUSH

Relax. Don’t try to immediately fill every moment. It’s good, even essential, to have varied interests and hobbies, but there is no rule, or even a guideline, that says you initially have to fill each moment of every day. Learn to meditate. Try yoga. Take long walks alone or with someone you love. If you don’t love anyone, consider getting a dog.

II. DON’T FRET

Relax even more. Take a sabbatical. If you’re like most of us you’ve never had one. Take a month (Type A) or six months or more (Type B) and do or don’t do as you please (See V). You can fill in (if you must) more “productive” activities later. You may simply enjoy having more time to talk with folks without looking at the clock. You are more than what you did for a living.

III. DON’T GO BACK INTO THE WORKPLACE IF YOU ARE NOT TOTALLY PREPARED FOR THE CHANGES YOU WILL FIND

Unless you have a paid consulting or part-time position (read: if you were not afraid to let go totally) at your previous place of employment, your views are no more than that – your views. When you take your arm out of the water, there is no hole left behind. No one is indispensable, and that’s as it should be.

IV. DON’T TRY TO IMPRESS PEOPLE WITH HOW IMPORTANT, COMPETENT, ETC., ETC., YOU WERE IN YOUR PAST LIFE

You will be liked or disliked, accepted or rejected, happy or unhappy, based on who you are now.

V. DON’T OVERLOOK THE HOME FRONT

Call it home dynamics, or psychology of the home front. Call it anything you wish – but if you are living with a significant other, you are about to attach new meaning to the term “significance.” Neither of you is as psychologically prepared for the change as you thought you were. Discuss the changes, as much as they can be envisioned, before retirement, and after, and discuss them often. After a few adjustments on everyone’s part, life can be even more beautiful.

VI. THINKING OF MOVING? DON’T BUY!! RENT, RENT, RENT!!

Studies have shown that only four percent of retirees actually make a permanent move. Putting down roots is important, but so are new experiences (See VII). Find a new place you like? Rent for at least a year before you buy. When you crunch the numbers, it makes great financial sense, especially if you are financing the new purchase from savings or other investments, or taking out a mortgage.
VII. YOU DON’T HAVE TO BE GEOGRAPHICALLY RESTRICTED
You can travel. Maine offers a huge variety of places and experiences. Colleges across the country rent out rooms. Inexpensive travel abroad is possible. Sponge off friends, but don’t give out your address.

VIII. DON’T THINK FUTURE GENERATIONS WON’T WANT TO KNOW ABOUT YOU, WHAT YOU THOUGHT AND FELT, FIGURED OUT AND RE-FIGURED OUT
Would you like to read interesting aspects of the life of your great grandparents? Future generations of your family will feel the same about you. You may not be considered the world’s greatest autobiographer but you are a direct link to the past and future. Write about it.

IX. DON’T BE AFRAID
Change can be frightening but not changing is even more so. Try new things that might interest you and know that it’s okay to fall on your face. Who’s judging? Who cares? Create something new – this may be as close as we ever get to God – even if it’s a pottery salad bowl that looks like a frying pan. It never existed before you created it. Time can get away from us, so structure time to create.

_The use of the imagination should come first – at least for some part of every day of your life._

_– Brenda Ueland_

X. DON’T OVERLOOK A JOURNEY INWARD
Don’t be afraid of anything. It will all work out (whatever “it” may be for you). Get to know yourself and be yourself. Your value is not limited to what you did for a living.

Finally, when asked “What do you do in retirement?” you can honestly respond, “I enjoy life.”

ABA FAQS ON EXTENDED REPORTING PERIOD COVERAGE

http://www.americanbar.org/groups/lawyers_professional_liability/resources/extended_reporting_coverage.html
This Help Document provides a basic introduction to working with Adobe Inc.’s proprietary PDF documents using Adobe’s READER program, version XI. A full discussion of features and capabilities is available at: http://helpx.adobe.com/reader.html.

GENERAL INFORMATION

This e-Book contains the entire contents of the publication. The structure of this material is specifically set to provide easy and quick access to any section or sub-section with a minimum of mouse clicks. By utilizing both “Bookmarks” and “hyperlinks” (links), the user can go directly to the area of interest or, conversely, scroll page by page through the entire document if desired. This product is entirely formatted in the Adobe PDF structure and requires that Adobe Reader or other suitable software be installed on your computer.

NAVIGATING WITHIN THE PUBLICATION

Opening this e-Book displays the cover of the publication where several buttons have been added. Clicking your mouse on the button of interest will take you to the desired material. As you have already discovered, clicking the “Getting Started” button brought you to this help document. Clicking the “Table of Contents” button will take you to a list of the sections in the publication with each title a link which, when clicked, will display the first page of that section.
When you follow links that take you into the text of the publication, the initial page of the selected chapter or sub-part will be displayed. Along with the text, a separate panel will also be displayed on the left side of the screen which contains a list of all the Bookmarks contained in the publication. An alternate method of navigating through the material is to click on the desired location displayed in this Panel.

Note: We recommend downloading the publication to your computer as opposed to viewing the publication in your web browser. If you choose to view in your browser, please note the publication bookmark panel may not open automatically and links, when clicked, may open in the same window and require you to utilize your "back" button to return to the ebook. Refer to your browser's help guide to learn more about navigating bookmarked/linked PDFs in your browser.
Printing selected pages

While viewing the desired page that you wish to print, right click your mouse while it points to the Bookmark in the left hand panel (not to the text in the page displayed which sets up the whole volume to be printed). Then select the “PRINT” option from the drop-down list. A window will open which provides the necessary controls to print the desired page (see diagram below).

!Print window

Note especially that the option to print “Pages” is selected. If “ALL” is specified, the complete book will be printed. Therefore, be very careful to insure the “PAGES” option is selected and the desired page number(s) is shown BEFORE clicking the “PRINT” button at the bottom of the window. The page number of the page you are viewing is shown to the right of the Pages option and also under the small display of the page in the lower right of the screen (in this example it is “Page 1 of 1 (35)” thus you are viewing page 35 of the document).
The following material is taken directly from the “Help” function of Adobe Reader and provides additional details regarding functionality of PDF documents.

Opening pages in a PDF

Depending on the PDF you open, you may need to move forward through multiple pages, see different parts of the page, or change the magnification. There are many ways to navigate, but the following items are commonly used:

Note: If you do not see these items, choose View > Show/Hide > Toolbar Items > Reset Toolbars.

Next and Previous

The Next Page  and Previous Page   buttons appear in the Page Navigation toolbar. The text box next to them is also interactive, so you can type a page number and press Enter to go directly to that page.

Scroll bars

Vertical and horizontal scroll bars appear to the right and bottom of the document pane whenever the view does not show the entire document. Click the arrows or drag to view other pages or different areas of the page.

Select & Zoom toolbar

This toolbar contains buttons and controls for changing the page magnification.

There are many ways to turn pages in a PDF. Many people use the buttons on the Page Navigation toolbar, but you can also use arrow keys, scroll bars, and other features to move forward and backward through a multipage PDF.
The Page Navigation toolbar opens by default. The default toolbar contains frequently used tools: the Show Next Page, Show Previous Page, and Page Number. Like all toolbars, the Page Navigation toolbar can be hidden and reopened by choosing it in the Toolbars menu under the View menu. You can display additional tools on the Page Navigation toolbar by right-clicking the toolbar and choosing an individual tool, Show All Tools, or More Tools and then selecting and deselecting tools in the dialog box.

Move through a PDF

- Do one of the following:
  - Click the Previous Page or Next Page button on the toolbar.
  - Choose View > Page Navigation > [location].
  - Choose View > Page Navigation > Page, type the page number in the Go To Page dialog box and then click OK.
  - Press the Page Up and Page Down keys on the keyboard.

Jump to a specific page

- Do one of the following:
  - From Single Page or Two-Up page display view, drag the vertical scroll bar until the page appears in the small pop-up display.
  - Type the page number to replace the one currently displayed in the Page Navigation toolbar, and press Enter.

Page thumbnails provide miniature previews of document pages. You can use thumbnails in the Page Thumbnails panel to change the display of pages and to go to other pages. The red page-view box in the page thumbnail indicates which area of the page appears. You can resize this box to change the zoom percentage.

1. Click the Page Thumbnails button or choose View > Show/Hide > Navigation Panes > Page Thumbnails to display the Page Thumbnails panel.
2. To jump to another page, click its thumbnail.
Navigate with links

Links can take you to another location in the current document, to other PDF documents, or to websites. Clicking a link can also open file attachments and play 3D content, movies, and sound clips. To play these media clips, you must have the appropriate hardware and software installed.

Note: Unless a link was created in Acrobat using the Link tool, you must have the Create Links From URLs option selected in the General preferences for a link to work correctly.

1. Choose the Select tool.
2. Position the pointer over the linked area on the page until the pointer changes to the hand with a pointing finger. A plus sign (+) or a w appears within the hand if the link points to the web. Then click the link.

Jump to bookmarked pages

Bookmarks provide a table of contents and usually represent the chapters and sections in a document. Bookmarks appear in the navigation pane.

![Bookmarks panel]

- A. Bookmarks button
- B. Click to display bookmark options menu.
- C. Expanded bookmark

1. Click the Bookmarks button, or choose View > Show/Hide > Navigation Panes > Bookmarks.
2. To jump to a topic, click the bookmark. Expand or collapse bookmark contents, as needed.

Note: Depending on how the bookmark was defined, clicking it may not take you to that location but perform some other action instead.

If the list of bookmarks disappears when you click a bookmark, click the Bookmarks button to display the list again. If you want to hide the Bookmarks button after you click a bookmark, select Hide After Use from the options menu.

Automatically scroll through a document

Automatic scrolling advances your view of the PDF at a steady rate, moving vertically down the document. If you interrupt the process by using the scroll bars to move back or forward to another page or position, automatic scrolling continues from that point forward. At the end of the PDF, automatic scrolling stops and does not begin again until you choose automatic scrolling again.

2. Press Esc to stop scrolling.

PDFs with file attachments

If you open a PDF that has one or more attached files, the Attachments panel automatically opens, listing the attached files. You can open these files for viewing, edit the attachments, and save your changes, as permitted by the document authors.

If you move the PDF to a new location, the attachments automatically move with it.
