Arbitration Dos and Don'ts for the Trial Lawyer

By Richard L. Mattiaccio

A client has just asked you to represent it in the arbitration of a contract dispute. The case looks pretty much like others you have taken to bench or jury trial victories. You think you are all set.

Think again. You would not try a jury trial as if it were a bench trial, or vice versa. Why assume that you should try a case in arbitration as if it were in court?

Arbitration rules, handbooks and training programs can provide valuable insight into the steps leading to the evidentiary hearing. The literature and training programs will take the practitioner in detail through the filing of claims; the initial administrative conference in administered cases; the arbitrator selection process; the first conference with the arbitrator(s) leading to the crucial first procedural order; the pre-hearing exchange of documents; limitations on discovery, motions, subpoenas on nonparties, and evidentiary objections; the filing of witness lists, pre-marked exhibits, witness statements, expert reports, and pre-hearing memos; and post-hearing confirmation or vacatur of awards. Relatively little can be found in the literature, however, about the evidentiary hearing itself.

In the real world, much depends on the arbitrator's background, so the common wisdom is that cases are frequently won or lost at the arbitrator selection phase. A second commonplace that should resonate with every trial lawyer is the need to learn as much as possible about the arbitrator and adapt attorney style to what works with an arbitrator assigned to the case. For example, some arbitrators like the hearing to feel like a bench trial. Others like every step in the process to function more like a business meeting. An attorney representing a party needs to know this in advance or take cues from the arbitrator during the preliminary conference.

Unlike jury selection, which often follows motions and discovery practice, an attorney in arbitration needs to determine at the beginning of the case what sort of arbitrator would be receptive to the case on the merits and to his or her style. Arbitrator selection is a subject worthy of dedicated study. The mechanics of arbitrator selection can vary depending on the nature of the case, the governing rules, and the terms of the arbitration clause. Still, some characteristics do appear across the commercial arbitrator spectrum.

Commercial arbitrators generally like to think of themselves as problem solvers and look to counsel to provide the tools arbitrators need to solve those problems. Arbitrators like to see the attorneys (a) focusing on the merits, (b) finding common ground on preliminary matters, and (c) using the time allotted efficiently and cost-effectively. They do not appreciate extensive attorney wrangling over procedure either before or at the hearing.

Arbitrators pride themselves on getting the point the first time it is made. They do not appreciate duplicative argument, briefing or testimony. They rarely see the point of having multiple witnesses testify to the same facts. They appreciate effective cross-examination, but they expect the cross-examiner to remain courteous and stay within pre-agreed time limits.

A good deal of planning, preparation and compromise with opposing counsel goes into effectively representing a client at a low-key, business-like, problem-solving evidentiary hearing. The following "dos and don'ts" are some practical tips offered to help a lawyer get started thinking about how to work with, not against, arbitration custom and practice in order to achieve good results for clients.

Dos	Don'ts
A. Study the Rules and Guidelines
Read the arbitration rules and guidelines from cover to cover. • Think about how they differ from what you are used to in court;	Don't read only the published rules applicable to the case. Also review the most relevant guidelines and protocols that tend to shape the conduct of the arbitrator(s) in specific categories or phases of arbitration. ³

Engage in ex parte communications with the case manager to the extent allowed by the rules. Propose an administrative conference with all counsel present.

Dos	Don'ts
Treat case managers like the important people they are. Be practical and helpful; it's a joint problem-solving exercise. Case managers can help counsel avoid costly missteps.	Don't condescend. Case managers may or may not have law practice experience or law degrees, but they are hardworking professionals and they understand some aspects of the arbitral process better than counsel ever will.
G. Address Confidentiality Up Front
Assess the confidentiality of the process before exchanging sensitive information.	Don't assume that the parties are bound to confidentiality without checking the rules.
 Not all arbitration rules provide the same level of confidentiality. 11 Determine whether express confidentiality protections should be negotiated with the other side or, failing agreement, whether a procedural order regarding confidentiality should be sought from the arbitrator(s). 12 	Don't rely on customary practice in litigation. Don't rely on informal agreements, especially if the confidentiality stakes are high.
 Ask the arbitrator(s) to embody any agreement in a procedural order.
H. Confer With Opposing Counsel to Work Out as Much as	s Possible
Reach out to counsel for the other side to try to agree on the basics, including: • Selection criteria for panel-selected arbitrator(s); • The extent and timing of the exchange of documents and other information; and • When, during the arbitration, mediation is most likely to be fruitful. Develop an agenda for the administrative conference. • Try to develop, collaboratively with opposing counsel, a list of at least some points to be addressed at the first conference.	Don't just spot an issue, pick a fight, and run to the arbitrator(s) to resolve it. The case manager or arbitrator(s) may conclude that there are no other adults in the room besides themselves. That will not help you when you need to ask for some leeway on any number of issues. Don't expect case managers to be mind-readers. If you need something out-of-the-ordinary to be addressed, make sure it makes it onto the agenda.
I. File an Early Witness List
File as comprehensive a list of witnesses as possible, as early in the case as possible. • Include in the witness list the current affiliations of witnesses.	Don't hold back on identifying your witnesses in the hopes of springing a surprise witness at the hearing. Generally, surprise is not allowed or is mitigated by allowing opposing counsel time to regroup. If you do hold back, you run the risk of arbitrator disclosures later in the case, resulting in (a) a disruptive replacement of an arbitrator mid-stream or (b) continued service of an arbitrator who might not have been selected in the first place if the disclosure had been made earlier.

Dos	Don'ts
J. Propose Rather Than Impose
Present joint proposals as just that: proposals for consideration by the arbitrator(s). • Arbitration is a creature of contract, but joint	Don't send the arbitrators edicts. Arbitrator(s) need to be persuaded that whatever you jointly propose is a reasonable approach because they are trained by the provider organizations to achieve efficiency and to maintain the distinctiveness of the arbitration process.
proposals that go too far in transforming arbitra- tion into litigation can undermine the nature and integrity of the arbitral process.
Prepare to present to the arbitrator(s) some of your own reasonable proposals to resolve open issues.	Don't just expect the arbitrator(s) to figure it out; you may not like how it goes, especially if opposing counsel offers solutions.
K. Remember the Golden Rule
Be courteous and cooperative in dealing with arbitrators, case managers, opposing counsel and staff, and witnesses.	Don't grandstand for clients or, if things seem to be going badly, shift into high (make-the-record-for-appeal) gear. There is no effective right of appeal.
 And, if you want to convey the impression to the arbitrator(s) that you think you have a good case, show good humor at all times. 	Don't go on the offensive, unless it is a charm offensive.
L. Be the Problem-Solver in the Room
Anticipate practical needs and likely disputes.	Don't pepper the arbitrator(s) with many disjointed re-

 Try to present unresolved disputes at scheduled conferences.
Keep your presentation interesting but low-key.	Don't waste time on theatrics. There is no jury to wake up or to impress. Would you bring a megaphone to a poker game?
M. Limit Discovery Requests to What Is Absolutely Essen	ntial
Whatever discovery you might ask for in court, cut it back.	Don't assume Federal Rules-style discovery is inscribed in the Bill of Rights. Even if broad discovery is written
 You may get more from opposing counsel than from the arbitrator(s). 	into your arbitration clause, arbitrators have discretion to streamline the process, and they feel pressure from pro- vider associations to do just that.
 Consider the legal limits on arbitrator power to compel discovery from non-parties.¹³
Consider tools to cut discovery time and costs.	Don't underestimate arbitrator receptiveness to creative

 Arbitrators appreciate a creative and practical approach.

307
Dos	Don'ts Don'ts
If the arbitration is international (i.e., between commercial parties of different nations):	Don't try to look for the needle in the other side's haystack The world detests American-style discovery. International
 Do not expect to be able to take any discovery de- positions at all.¹⁴ 	arbitration practice and procedure reflect that consensus. If the case is governed by international arbitration rules, the fact that arbitration is taking place in the U.S. does no make discovery any more available.
 Exchange of written fact witness statements in lieu of live direct is the norm.¹⁵
 Fact witness statements are often the only way to avoid surprise under international proce- dures.
 Document exchange is limited.¹⁶ 	-
 Prepare extremely specific requests for documents you don't already have but really need.
If the case is domestic in nature:	Don't assume that proportionality is a term first coined in

-The smaller the case, the fewer and shorter the depositions, so figure out what you really need, and go for that.

 Advise your client realistically and up front about the limits of discovery in arbitration.
There are guidelines and articles explaining the limits of discovery in arbitration. Send one or two to your client if it does not believe you when you explain the limitations on discovery in arbitration.
N. Present Disputes Informally
Provide the arbitrator(s) with a brief, written, jointly submitted or at least even-handed preview of the dispute.	Don't expect the arbitrator(s) to rule on complex and important discovery disputes at a conference without having had time to think about it and confer with one another.
O. Propose Dispositive Motions When They Meet Arbitrat	ion Standards
Propose a dispositive motion only if it is likely to succeed and to streamline the case. ¹⁸	Don't ask to make dispositive motions just to condition arbitrator thinking in your favor. It is not efficient, and busy
 Prepare a one or two-page letter outlining the grounds, likelihood of success, and likely econo- mies to be achieved from the dispositive motion. 	arbitrators might conclude that you are trying to make e tra work for yourself.

Dos	Don'ts
P. Use Witness Statements and Exchange Experts' Reports
Consider agreeing to the use of witness statements as part of direct testimony even if not required to do so. • Fact witnesses rarely crack on direct examination. • Exchange experts' reports. Parties rarely have an opportunity to take the deposition of opposing experts in arbitration. You may as well take some credit for adopting an approach that otherwise will be imposed. • Incorporate your expert report as an integral part of the expert's sworn testimony.	Don't fight tooth-and-nail against the witness statement procedure just because it is unfamiliar or can sometimes be abused; you can negotiate the ground rules to limit abuse. Don't assume that witness statements and experts' reports prevent the witness from telling her story. Arbitrators can be persuaded to let witnesses give brief overviews of direct testimony and to update or correct statements or reports just before cross-examination at the hearing.
Prepare fact witness statements with the witness and in the witness' own voice.	Don't submit a witness statement that reads like a memo of law. It will not be effective and your witness may deserve better.
Q. Design Helpful Hearing Submissions
Organize hearing exhibits so that they are arbitrator-friendly. • Arbitrators pick up bundles of hearing exhibits and read them.	Don't submit exhibit volumes that resemble shuffled decks of playing cards.
Submit a separate volume of joint exhibits that are the key, undisputedly authentic documents in the case. • Parties may disagree as to the meaning of undisputedly authentic and relevant documents, but that does not mean the documents are not authentic or are not key to the dispute.	Don't create logistical challenges for the arbitrator(s) by burying the basic documents in larger document groupings. Many arbitrators work without any office support.
Provide documents in whatever form(s) the arbitrator(s) request. • Arbitrators on the same panel may have very different working styles. • Offer to have a courtesy paper set in the hearing room for each arbitrator.	Don't assume that all arbitrators have the same technological savvy. Some may consider the courtesy set to be essential; others may see it as unnecessary and wasteful. The key is to find out each arbitrator's preference.
Keep the record organized and make it easy for the arbitrator(s) to focus on what's important. • Consider with an open mind an arbitrator's request for authorization to work with a colleague on some aspects of a complex, large-record case. Arbitrators do not have access to law clerks and they cannot ask for help from law firm colleagues unless the parties expressly authorize it.	Don't automatically react negatively if an arbitrator, particularly in a complex, big-document commercial matter, asks for authorization to draw on a colleague for support for specific tasks. Depending on how the arrangement is structured, it could result in time and cost savings, and a better structured or reasoned award.
Keep Pre-Hearing Memos Concise. • Say things once.	Don't engage in repetition. Repetition tends to annoy arbitrators. Don't engage in repetition. Don't.

Dos	Don'ts
R. Decide on a Form of Award Well Before the Hearing
Inform the arbitrator(s) before the evidentiary hearing as to what form of award is required.	Don't ask for a reasoned award without agreeing to provide the arbitrator(s) with a hearing transcript or, if no transcript is made, to provide the arbitrator(s) with proposed findings of fact or some less formal version thereof.
 Depending on the applicable rules, arbitrator(s) may decide on the form of award much sooner in the case, but the eve of the evidentiary hear- ing should be the absolute minimum notice so the arbitrator(s) can identify the tools they need to receive from the parties.
S. Discuss the House Rules in Advance of the Hearing
Clarify any restrictions on communicating with witnesses during their testimony, or on the witness' attendance during the testimony of other witnesses.	Don't assume that you, the arbitrator(s) and opposing counsel all have the same practice experience background with respect to the handling of witnesses and other hear-
 Ask the arbitrator(s) to set forth any restrictions in a procedural order. 	ing-room conduct.
T. Propose Hearing Procedures That Maximize Time for Wi Organized	itness Testimony and That Help Keep the Arbitrator(s)
Keep housekeeping at the hearing to a minimum.	Don't burden the transcript with lengthy discussions un-
 Try to limit discussion of administrative details to the beginning or end of the hearing day. 	related to the merits. The transcript (even in paper form) should be user-friendly for the arbitrator(s) in preparing the award.
 Try to work out problems off the record and then confirm agreements on the record.
Submit an order of presentation of witnesses in advance of the hearing.	Don't try to surprise the arbitrators with your next witness Arbitrators like to prepare for witnesses too.
 Update the line-up at the end of each day for the next day.
Have your next witness in the batter's box.	Don't waste expensive hearing time waiting for a witness who is stuck in traffic. Some arbitrators, and some clients who hear an arbitrator grousing about it, might hold it against you.
Make evidentiary objections briefly, in writing, and fo- cused on significant matters; time the objections so as not to disrupt hearing flow.	Don't use evidentiary objections to break a witness' rhythm or to run the clock. Arbitrators recognize the tactic, and may deduct points from your credibility score and/or help the witness get back on track.
 Limit evidentiary objections during the hearing to important questions of time management, rel- evance, weight and confidentiality. 	Don't fuss over prejudice unless the evidence is irrelevant and borders on the outrageous. Arbitrators think they are too sophisticated to have to worry about becoming prejudiced, but might draw the line at attempts to delve into clearly non-probative personal matters.

Dos	Don'ts
Ask the arbitrator(s) whether closing arguments or post- hearing briefs would be more helpful.	Don't just repeat in closing the themes you have been developing all through the case; address what's on the mind(s) of the arbitrator(s) at that point in the hearing. It is your last chance to put the arbitrator(s) at ease with respect to what may be bothering them about your case or defenses.
 Ask the arbitrator(s) what points they would most like to be addressed in closing arguments and/or briefs, and adjust accordingly.
 This is not just about being courteous. You want to know what might be troubling the arbitrator(s) and you want to deal with it as best you can. 	Don't repeat arguments that are not essential to your case and that have not gotten any traction with the arbitrator(s) just because your client likes to hear them. You are not there to entertain or soothe the client but to get the client the best possible result.
 Make use of arbitrator flexibility. For example, in some cases it might make sense to have a closing argument as to some issues plus a short brief on a point or two that are better addressed in writing, with a chart that the arbitrators might find helpful but requires a bit more time to prepare, etc.
Provide the arbitrator(s) with hearing transcripts at the same time you receive them.	Don't just do the minimum or the usual; go out of your way to make it as easy as possible for the arbitrator(s), par-
 If you are getting daily copy, offer it. 	ticularly when doing so has no material impact on cost.
 Ask each arbitrator what form (paper, electronic, software) is preferred, and include any court re- porter index.
Supply a joint, definitive, final list of all the documents in evidence.	Don't rely on the court reporter to provide the exhibit list if there are exhibits in evidence that were not used with wit-
 This is especially important in the larger-document cases or when exhibits have been moved into evi- dence without testimony. 	nesses or not formally moved in evidence on the record.
 Arbitrators like to have a reliable checklist to make sure they have reviewed and considered all the evidence in the record.
U. Be Courteous to the End	*
Thank the arbitrator(s) and case manager, each by name, for their service and attention.	Don't just say thank you; when you say it, say it like you mean it.
Acknowledge the members of your team at all levels.
Thank the opposing attorney(s). If counsel was generally obstructive but cooperated in some small way, thank counsel specifically for that small detail even though (or perhaps because) it might seem like faint praise.	The second secon

- 12. See AAA Commercial Arb. Rules, supra note 5, art. R-23; CPR Rules, supra note 11, art. R-11; JAMS Comprehensive Arb. Rules, supra note 11, art. R-26(b).
- 13. If the arbitration is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), the courts are split as to whether FAA Section 7 authorizes the arbitrators to issue subpoenas for discovery document production or deposition testimony, or whether Section 7 only extends to subpoenas for attendance at the evidentiary hearing. See generally, CCA Best Practices Guide, supra note 8, at 149-52. If the arbitration is governed by state arbitration law, the power of the arbitrator(s) to issue subpoenas to nonparties may vary from state to state.
- 14. ICDR Dispute Resol. Procedures, supra note 8, art. 21.10 ("10. Depositions...generally are not appropriate procedures for obtaining information in an arbitration under these Rules."); JAMS Efficiency Guidelines, supra note 3, at 3 ("In JAMS international arbitrations, the prevailing practice is that depositions are not - permitted."). Compare NYSBA Domestic Guidelines, supra note 3, at 13-14, with NYSBA International Guidelines, supra note 3, at 28.

- 15. See, e.g., ICDR Dispute Resol. Procedures, supra note 8, art. 21.10 ("Unless otherwise agreed by the parties or directed by the tribunal, evidence of witnesses may be presented in the form of written statements signed by them."); JAMS Efficiency Guidelines, supra note 3, at 3 ("In international arbitrations, the use of written witness statements in lieu of direct testimony...is a common, broadly accepted practice.").
- 16. See NYSBA International Guidelines, supra note 3, at 27-28.
- 17. See NYSBA Domestic Guidelines, supra note 3, at 14.
- 18. See AAA Commercial Arb. Rules, supra note 5, R-33 ("The arbitrator may allow the filing of and make rulings upon a dispositive motion only if the arbitrator determines that the moving party has shown that the motion is likely to succeed and dispose of or narrow the issues in the case."); CPR Early Disposition Guidelines, supra note 3, Guideline 2.4 ("It is important to bear in mind that even if early disposition of an issue may be accomplished quickly and fairly, it nevertheless may not be appropriate if it is not likely, if granted, to result in a material reduction of the total time and cost in reaching final resolution of the case.").
