Healthcare Dispute Resolution: Navigating A Highly Regulated Industry

With the exponential growth of the healthcare industry, the way in which healthcare disputes are resolved has become an increasingly important aspect of legal practice. A proper understanding of applicable statute and regulation is essential to the appropriate resolution of these matters.

This CLE program will examine current trends and circumstances in the healthcare dispute resolution setting, with a special focus on the MLMIC demutualization and mandatory arbitration clauses, with further focus on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Kindred v. Clark. The panel will also discuss the need for competence among neutrals and advocates dealing with the complicated healthcare regulatory scheme in a dispute resolution context.
