Trial Lawyers Section Digest

A publication of the Trial Lawyers Section of the New York State Bar Association

Message from the Incoming Chair

As the members of our Section know, facts and evidence are the lifeblood of every trial attorney's work. The analysis of facts and evidence is our "daily grind." Sometimes the facts are difficult to deal with and not helpful to our client's case. Regardless of whether facts and evidence are favorable or unfavorable for our client's case, all trial attorneys toil over the evidence and the standards of admissibility to best advise our clients on trial or settlement strategy. Really, I cannot think of a better time—or a more challenging time—to be a trial attorney. Having the benefit of analyzing facts and the admissibility of evidence in our daily professional lives—we are lately confronted with "alternate facts," "fake news,"—and overall the impact of social media on our profession, the courts, and our clients, I believe that the recent public discourse on these topics has highlighted the role of the legal profession and our system of jurisprudence in American life. Participation in our professional organizations becomes even more important against this backdrop.

This year our Section will be sponsoring and cosponsoring membership events throughout the state. In a profession such as ours, it is always important to break out of your bubble! It's so easy to go through a daily routine in your own office without understanding the value of meeting other members of the profession in person. In my experience, outside of the friends I made in law school, the longest and most enduring connections I have made in this profession came about from my participation in Bar Association committees and events. You never know when you might need a friend to give you a fresh outlook on an issue, or to help you explore a different opportunity in legal practice. I hope that new members of our profession will actively engage in our Section by coming to meetings in person whenever possible, and volunteering for work on a committee that interests them. I invite anyone who would like to explore opportunities for active participation in our Section to contact me if you would like more information about a committee, an event, or our Section in general.

With an objective of enhancing the advocacy skills of law students in our state, this past February, our Committee Chair Tom Valet once again managed the New York Regional Round of the National Trial Competition at the U.S. District Courthouse for the Southern District on Pearl Street in New York City. Out of the 15 law schools in our state, 11 competed in this program, which was hosted this year by Fordham Law School. The two winning teams were St. John's University Law School and Brooklyn Law School. We extend our congratulations to all participants, to our winning law schools, and to the Overall Best Advocate,

Noreen DeWire Grimmick

Christopher Clark from Syracuse University School of Law. This program is a cornerstone of our Section's commitment to enhancing the advocacy skills of law students in our state. Thank you especially to Tom Valet and Violet Samuels for your ongoing efforts and commitment of time making for another successful competition. We ask all Section members to consider volunteering their time to support the 2018 competition next year.

Save the dates!! This year our Summer Meeting will be held in beautiful Hotel Hershey in Hershey Pennsylvania from August 6, 2017 through August 9, 2017. As many of our Section members know, beautiful golf courses, wonderful family recreation, and great continuing CLE courses will be offered during our summer meeting. Hershey, Pennsylvania is a reasonable driving distance for a good number of our Section members, so we expect a good turnout for this program. More details about the program will be available on our website shortly.

It was wonderful meeting so many members of the Trial Lawyers Section at our January meeting in New York City this year. We welcomed several new members to our Executive Committee and we look forward to their active participation in the leadership of our Section in the coming years.

2017 New York Regional Round of the National Trial Competition

By Thomas P. Valet

The 2017 New York Regional Round of the National Trial Competition was held on the weekend of February 10-12. This is the 42nd consecutive year that the Trial Lawyers Section of the New York State Bar Association has served as the host for this Mock Trial Competition for law students.

This year, 11 law schools from New York State entered the competition, sending 20 teams made up of three law students each. The schools that competed this year were Brooklyn Law School, Buffalo Law, Cardozo Law School, Cornell Law, Fordham Law, Hofstra Law, NYU Law, New York Law School, Pace Law School, St. John's Law and Syracuse Law.

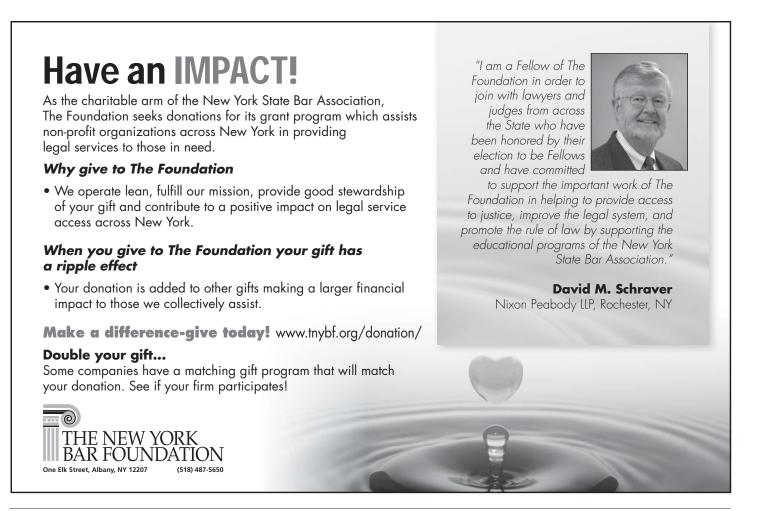

Fordham Law School served as the host school. Major thanks go to Adam Shlahet, Director of Student Advocacy at Fordham Law, and Prof. James Kieran, both of whom devoted a considerable amount of time to helping organize and run the competition.

The competition this year was held at the United States District Court, Southern District Courthouse at 500 Pearl Street. This was a wonderful venue for the students to compete in and we wish to thank the Chief Judge of the Southern District, the Hon. Colleen McMahon, for allowing us to hold the competition at the Southern District Courthouse.

In this mock trial competition, the law students are required to try an entire case from start to finish, including opening statements, direct and cross-examination of witnesses, closing statements and motions at various points of the trial. A presiding judge oversees the trial and lawyer/evaluators score the students based on their performance in presenting their cases.

After three rounds of competition, eight teams advanced to the Semi-Finals held on Sunday morning:

- Teams A and B from Brooklyn, Team E from Cardozo, Teams I and J from Fordham, Team N from NYU, Team Q from St. John's, Team S from Syracuse.
- Teams A and B from Brooklyn advanced to the Final Round along with teams from St. John's and Syracuse.. In the Finals, Brooklyn Team B defeated Syracuse Law and St. John's Law defeated Brooklyn Team A.
- St. John's Law and Brooklyn Law were crowned Co-Champions of the New York Regional Competition and both teams will go on to represent New York in the National NTC Finals to be held in Texas in March 2017.

The Trial Lawyers Section recognized several individual students with awards in each of the various disciplines of the trial:

- Best Opening Statement: Arielle Cummings, St. John's Law
- Best Direct Examination: Loreen Bousmail, NYU Law
- Best Cross-Examination: Loreen Bousmail, NYU Law
- Best Closing Statement: Loreen Bousmail, NYU Law
- Best Overall Advocate, Preliminary Rounds: Sean Brucker, Hofstra Law
- Anthony DeMarco Jr. Best Overall Advocate Award: Christopher Clark, Syracuse Law
- The Prof. Travis Lewin Best Coaches Award: Brooklyn Law School

Congratulations to all who competed this year and best of luck to St. John's and Brooklyn at the National Finals.

Thomas P. Valet is a past chair of the Trial Lawyers Section of the New York State Bar Association.

Arbitration Dos and Don'ts for the Trial Lawyer

By Richard L. Mattiaccio

A client has just asked you to represent it in the arbitration of a contract dispute. The case looks pretty much like others you have taken to bench or jury trial victories. You think you are all set.

Think again. You would not try a jury trial as if it were a bench trial, or vice versa. Why assume that you should try a case in arbitration as if it were in court?

Arbitration rules, handbooks and training programs can provide valuable insight into the steps leading to the evidentiary hearing. The literature and training programs will take the practitioner in detail through the filing of claims; the initial administrative conference in administered cases; the arbitrator selection process; the first conference with the arbitrator(s) leading to the crucial first procedural order; the pre-hearing exchange of documents; limitations on discovery, motions, subpoenas on nonparties, and evidentiary objections; the filing of witness lists, pre-marked exhibits, witness statements, expert reports, and pre-hearing memos; and post-hearing confirmation or vacatur of awards. Relatively little can be found in the literature, however, about the evidentiary hearing itself.

In the real world, much depends on the arbitrator's background, so the common wisdom is that cases are frequently won or lost at the arbitrator selection phase. A second commonplace that should resonate with every trial lawyer is the need to learn as much as possible about the arbitrator and adapt attorney style to what works with an arbitrator assigned to the case. For example, some arbitrators like the hearing to feel like a bench trial. Others like every step in the process to function more like a business meeting. An attorney representing a party needs to know this in advance or take cues from the arbitrator during the preliminary conference.

Unlike jury selection, which often follows motions and discovery practice, an attorney in arbitration needs to determine at the beginning of the case what sort of arbitrator would be receptive to the case on the merits and to his or her style. Arbitrator selection is a subject worthy of dedicated study. The mechanics of arbitrator selection can vary depending on the nature of the case, the governing rules, and the terms of the arbitration clause. Still, some characteristics do appear across the commercial arbitrator spectrum.

Commercial arbitrators generally like to think of themselves as problem solvers and look to counsel to provide the tools arbitrators need to solve those problems. Arbitrators like to see the attorneys (a) focusing on the merits, (b) finding common ground on preliminary matters, and (c) using the time allotted efficiently and cost-effectively. They do not appreciate extensive attorney wrangling over procedure either before or at the hearing.

Arbitrators pride themselves on getting the point the first time it is made. They do not appreciate duplicative argument, briefing or testimony. They rarely see the point of having multiple witnesses testify to the same facts. They appreciate effective cross-examination, but they expect the cross-examiner to remain courteous and stay within pre-agreed time limits.

A good deal of planning, preparation and compromise with opposing counsel goes into effectively representing a client at a low-key, business-like, problem-solving evidentiary hearing. The following "dos and don'ts" are some practical tips offered to help a lawyer get started thinking about how to work with, not against, arbitration custom and practice in order to achieve good results for clients.

Dos	Don'ts
A. Study the Rules and Guidelines
Read the arbitration rules and guidelines from cover to cover.  • Think about how they differ from what you are used to in court;	Don't read only the published rules applicable to the case. Also review the most relevant guidelines and protocols that tend to shape the conduct of the arbitrator(s) in specific categories or phases of arbitration. <sup>3</sup>
Assume the arbitrator(s) will enforce the rules and follow the guidelines; and <ul> <li>Review the literature on commercial arbitration, especially when it is addressed to counsel's obliga- tions.<sup>2</sup></li> </ul>
B. Advise the Client About Arbitration
Provide your early case assessment with the arbitration process in mind.	Don't overlook the strategic and tactical advantages or potential disadvantages of arbitration when you provide the client with your case assessment.
<ul> <li>Positions can be stronger or weaker in arbitration; figure it out before you advise the client.</li> </ul>	Don't assume your client knows what to expect in arbitration; determine its experience level and adjust your advice
<ul> <li>Provide the client with realistic projections of arbitration cost and time in your early case assessment, and update your assessments.<sup>4</sup></li> </ul>	accordingly.
<ul> <li>Introduce the concept of mediation as a related step in the arbitration process.<sup>5</sup></li> <li>• Make clear that arbitrators are generally not expected or supposed to get involved in settlement discussions but appreciate it when the parties give it a try.</li> </ul>	Don't be deterred by a client's concern that suggesting mediation may send a signal of weakness. Explain that, if the arbitrator(s) find out that your side wants to pursue mediation or some other settlement device, the only risk is that your side will come across as sane.
<ul> <li>Point to the provider organization's policies or procedures that favor mediation and that may treat mediation as a normal step within the arbitration process.<sup>6</sup></li> </ul>
Send the client a few articles if it is skeptical.	Don't unnecessarily place stress on your credibility with a
<ul> <li>Providers and bar groups offer guides for the law- yer and non-lawyer alike;<sup>7</sup> read them, send the best-suited one to your client, and have a discus- sion with the client about the pros and cons of the process.</li> </ul>	client that is highly resistant to the advice. You can point to provider institution user handbooks and to neutrals on record providing the same advice.
C. Map Case Strategy Before the First Conference with the Arbitrator(s)
Have an early game plan, ideally, before arbitrator selection.  • Before the first conference with the arbitrator(s), know what you need in terms of exchanges of documents and other information. The first procedural order is your road map for the case.	Don't improvise. Your game plan may have to be adjusted, but, without one, you will not make good use of those crucial early encounters with the arbitrator(s), and the first procedural order will feel like a straightjacket as the case evolves in unexpected ways.

Dos	Don'ts
D. Assume Very Little Discovery
Develop your core case and defenses on the assumption of little or no discovery.	Don't think that you can build a case out of the other side's files or deposition testimony of its witnesses. Broad discovery is rarely allowed in domestic arbitration, and is just not available in international commercial cases. Arbitrators are trained to limit discovery, related expense, and the time
<ul> <li>Search your client's records to dig out all the essential documents.</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Line up, interview and lock in the availability of all of your key witnesses.</li> </ul>	needed to get to an award. <sup>8</sup> Don't assume that all arbitrators appreciate the challenges
• Use the Internet.	you face as counsel. Look for clues in the arbitrator candidate's professional experience. Has the arbitrator ever tried
<ul> <li>Consider a private investigator, if needed, to fill in the blanks.</li> </ul>	a case in court or in arbitration? How important will arbitrator empathy for the trial lawyer be as you prepare and
<ul> <li>Look to some limited discovery for the gravy and, whenever possible, not for the meat and potatoes.</li> </ul>	present your case?
Prepare your basic discovery plan before arbitrator selection.
<ul> <li>If discovery is essential to your case, select arbitrator(s) with an active case load in court, or with experience as counsel in litigation, or as a judge in a court that allows broad discovery.</li> </ul>
E. Gear Up for Arbitrator Selection
Network to find the right arbitrator(s).	Don't rely entirely on an official arbitrator biography if you
<ul> <li>Ask experienced arbitration counsel and other neutrals about potential arbitrators.</li> </ul>	can reach out to lawyers who have had experience with that arbitrator. There are online resources to help in some circumstances. <sup>10</sup>
<ul> <li>Select arbitrator(s), especially the chair or sole arbitrator, with a proven ability to manage the process.<sup>9</sup></li> </ul>
Know the rules governing arbitrator selection in your case before starting the selection process.	Don't expect busy case managers to focus right away on any special provisions on arbitrator selection or qualifica-
<ul> <li>The process of arbitrator selection can vary depend- ing on the arbitration clause and the governing rules and procedures.</li> </ul>	tions in your arbitration clause; point out those provisions before the case manager gets too far along in the arbitrator selection process.
<ul> <li>To some degree, an arbitration clause can vary the procedures that are generally incorporated by reference.</li> </ul>
F. Ask for an Early Administrative Conference and Work Collaboratively with the Case Manager at All Times
Ask for an administrative meeting with the case manager prior to arbitrator selection.	Don't miss any opportunity to show the case manager that you are trying your best to be practical and that you are a straight shooter. Counsel cannot have ex parte communications with arbitrators, but case managers can and do talk with the arbitrator(s), and vice versa, whenever they think it serves a purpose.
Make clear what your preferred criteria are for arbitrator selection.
• Engage in ex parte communications with the case manager to the extent allowed by the rules.

• Propose an administrative conference with all counsel present.

Dos	Don'ts
Treat case managers like the important people they are.	Don't condescend. Case managers may or may not have
• Be practical and helpful; it's a joint problem-solving exercise.	law practice experience or law degrees, but they are hard- working professionals and they understand some aspects of the arbitral process better than counsel ever will.
<ul> <li>Case managers can help counsel avoid costly mis- steps.</li> </ul>	•
G. Address Confidentiality Up Front
Assess the confidentiality of the process before exchanging sensitive information.	Don't assume that the parties are bound to confidentiality without checking the rules.
Not all arbitration rules provide the same level of	Don't rely on customary practice in litigation.
confidentiality. <sup>11</sup>	Don't rely on informal agreements, especially if the confi-

<ul> <li>Ask the arbitrator(s) to embody any agreement in a procedural order.</li> </ul>
H. Confer With Opposing Counsel to Work Out as Much as Possible
Reach out to counsel for the other side to try to agree on the basics, including:	Don't just spot an issue, pick a fight, and run to the arbitrator(s) to resolve it. The case manager or arbitrator(s)
<ul> <li>Selection criteria for panel-selected arbitrator(s);</li> </ul>	may conclude that there are no other adults in the room besides themselves. That will not help you when you need
<ul> <li>The extent and timing of the exchange of documents and other information; and</li> </ul>	to ask for some leeway on any number of issues.  Don't expect case managers to be mind-readers. If you
<ul> <li>When, during the arbitration, mediation is most likely to be fruitful.</li> </ul>	need something out-of-the-ordinary to be addressed, make sure it makes it onto the agenda.
Develop an agenda for the administrative conference.
<ul> <li>Try to develop, collaboratively with opposing counsel, a list of at least some points to be addressed at the first conference.</li> </ul>
I. File an Early Witness List

File as comprehensive a list of witnesses as possible, as early in the case as possible.

• Include in the witness list the current affiliations of witnesses.

Don't hold back on identifying your witnesses in the hopes of springing a surprise witness at the hearing. Generally, surprise is not allowed or is mitigated by allowing opposing counsel time to regroup. If you do hold back, you run the risk of arbitrator disclosures later in the case, resulting in (a) a disruptive replacement of an arbitrator mid-stream, or (b) continued service of an arbitrator who might not have been selected in the first place if the disclosure had been made earlier.

Dos	Don'ts
J. Propose Rather Than Impose
Present joint proposals as just that: proposals for consideration by the arbitrator(s).	Don't send the arbitrators edicts. Arbitrator(s) need to be persuaded that whatever you jointly propose is a reasonable approach because they are trained by the provider organizations to achieve efficiency and to maintain the distinctiveness of the arbitration process.
<ul> <li>Arbitration is a creature of contract, but joint proposals that go too far in transforming arbitration into litigation can undermine the nature and integrity of the arbitral process.</li> </ul>
Prepare to present to the arbitrator(s) some of your own reasonable proposals to resolve open issues.	Don't just expect the arbitrator(s) to figure it out; you may not like how it goes, especially if opposing counsel offers solutions.
K. Remember the Golden Rule
Be courteous and cooperative in dealing with arbitrators, case managers, opposing counsel and staff, and witnesses.	Don't grandstand for clients or, if things seem to be going badly, shift into high (make-the-record-for-appeal) gear. There is no effective right of appeal.
<ul> <li>And, if you want to convey the impression to the arbitrator(s) that you think you have a good case, show good humor at all times.</li> </ul>	Don't go on the offensive, unless it is a charm offensive.
L. Be the Problem-Solver in the Room
Anticipate practical needs and likely disputes.	Don't pepper the arbitrator(s) with many disjointed re-
Try to resolve disputes with opposing counsel.	quests that could have been presented at one time.
<ul> <li>Try to present unresolved disputes at scheduled conferences.</li> </ul>
Keep your presentation interesting but low-key.	Don't waste time on theatrics. There is no jury to wake up or to impress. Would you bring a megaphone to a poker game?
M. Limit Discovery Requests to What Is Absolutely Essential
Whatever discovery you might ask for in court, cut it back.	Don't assume Federal Rules-style discovery is inscribed in the Bill of Rights. Even if broad discovery is written
<ul> <li>You may get more from opposing counsel than from the arbitrator(s).</li> </ul>	into your arbitration clause, arbitrators have discretion to streamline the process, and they feel pressure from provider associations to do just that.
<ul> <li>Consider the legal limits on arbitrator power to compel discovery from non-parties.<sup>13</sup></li> </ul>
Consider tools to cut discovery time and costs.	Don't underestimate arbitrator receptiveness to creative solutions or the ability of technology to solve or mitigate problems created by technology.
<ul> <li>Computer-assisted electronic document review a/k/a "predictive coding" is one example.</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Arbitrators appreciate a creative and practical approach.</li> </ul>

Dos	Don'ts
If the arbitration is international (i.e., between commercial	Don't try to look for the needle in the other side's haystack.
parties of different nations):	The world detests American-style discovery. International arbitration practice and procedure reflect that consensus. If the case is governed by international arbitration rules, the fact that arbitration is taking place in the U.S. does not make discovery any more available.
<ul> <li>Do not expect to be able to take any discovery de- positions at all.<sup>14</sup></li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Exchange of written fact witness statements in lieu of live direct is the norm.<sup>15</sup></li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Fact witness statements are often the only way to avoid surprise under international proce- dures.</li> </ul>
• Document exchange is limited. 16
<ul> <li>Prepare extremely specific requests for documents you don't already have but really need.</li> </ul>
If the case is domestic in nature:	Don't assume that proportionality is a term first coined in
<ul> <li>Expect to be told you can take, at most, a very limited number of depositions of limited duration.<sup>17</sup></li> </ul>	response to discovery excesses in Federal Rules practice. Providers have been training commercial arbitrators for years to limit discovery to what is needed and proportional.
-The smaller the case, the fewer and shorter the depositions, so figure out what you really need, and go for that.
Expect push-back in response to a litigation-like discovery plan:	Don't panic if you are used to broad discovery before trial. In arbitration, the hearing-by-installment approach usually
<ul> <li>Even if you work out a joint proposal and present it on a silver platter.</li> </ul>	affords ample opportunity to regroup. Arbitrators have the flexibility to remedy genuine surprise and are sensitive to the need for procedural fairness.
<ul> <li>Advise your client realistically and up front about the limits of discovery in arbitration.</li> </ul>
There are guidelines and articles explaining the limits of discovery in arbitration. Send one or two to your client if it does not believe you when you explain the limitations on discovery in arbitration.
N. Present Disputes Informally
Provide the arbitrator(s) with a brief, written, jointly submitted or at least even-handed preview of the dispute.	Don't expect the arbitrator(s) to rule on complex and important discovery disputes at a conference without having had time to think about it and confer with one another.
O. Propose Dispositive Motions When They Meet Arbitration Standards
Propose a dispositive motion only if it is likely to succeed and to streamline the case. 18	Don't ask to make dispositive motions just to condition arbitrator thinking in your favor. It is not efficient, and busy
<ul> <li>Prepare a one or two-page letter outlining the grounds, likelihood of success, and likely econo- mies to be achieved from the dispositive motion.</li> </ul>	arbitrators might conclude that you are trying to make extra work for yourself.

Dos	Don'ts
P. Use Witness Statements and Exchange Experts' Reports
Consider agreeing to the use of witness statements as part of direct testimony even if not required to do so.  • Fact witnesses rarely crack on direct examination.  • Exchange experts' reports. Parties rarely have an opportunity to take the deposition of opposing experts in arbitration. You may as well take some credit for adopting an approach that otherwise will be imposed.  • Incorporate your expert report as an integral part of the expert's sworn testimony.	Don't fight tooth-and-nail against the witness statement procedure just because it is unfamiliar or can sometimes be abused; you can negotiate the ground rules to limit abuse.  Don't assume that witness statements and experts' reports prevent the witness from telling her story. Arbitrators can be persuaded to let witnesses give brief overviews of direct testimony and to update or correct statements or reports just before cross-examination at the hearing.
Prepare fact witness statements with the witness and in the witness' own voice.	Don't submit a witness statement that reads like a memo of law. It will not be effective and your witness may deserve better.
Q. Design Helpful Hearing Submissions
Organize hearing exhibits so that they are arbitrator-friendly.  • Arbitrators pick up bundles of hearing exhibits and	Don't submit exhibit volumes that resemble shuffled decks of playing cards.
read them.  Submit a separate volume of joint exhibits that are the key, undisputedly authentic documents in the case.  • Parties may disagree as to the meaning of undisputedly authentic and relevant documents, but that does not mean the documents are not authentic or are not key to the dispute.	Don't create logistical challenges for the arbitrator(s) by burying the basic documents in larger document groupings. Many arbitrators work without any office support.
Provide documents in whatever form(s) the arbitrator(s) request.  • Arbitrators on the same panel may have very different working styles.  • Offer to have a courtesy paper set in the hearing room for each arbitrator.	Don't assume that all arbitrators have the same technological savvy. Some may consider the courtesy set to be essential; others may see it as unnecessary and wasteful. The key is to find out each arbitrator's preference.
Keep the record organized and make it easy for the arbitrator(s) to focus on what's important.  • Consider with an open mind an arbitrator's request for authorization to work with a colleague on some aspects of a complex, large-record case. Arbitrators do not have access to law clerks and they cannot ask for help from law firm colleagues unless the parties expressly authorize it.	Don't automatically react negatively if an arbitrator, particularly in a complex, big-document commercial matter, asks for authorization to draw on a colleague for support for specific tasks. Depending on how the arrangement is structured, it could result in time and cost savings, and a better structured or reasoned award.
Keep Pre-Hearing Memos Concise.  • Say things once.	Don't engage in repetition. Repetition tends to annoy arbitrators.  Don't engage in repetition.  Don't.

Dos	Don'ts
R. Decide on a Form of Award Well Before the Hearing	,
Inform the arbitrator(s) before the evidentiary hearing as to what form of award is required.	Don't ask for a reasoned award without agreeing to provide the arbitrator(s) with a hearing transcript or, if no transcript is made, to provide the arbitrator(s) with pro-
<ul> <li>Depending on the applicable rules, arbitrator(s) may decide on the form of award much sooner in the case, but the eve of the evidentiary hear- ing should be the absolute minimum notice so the arbitrator(s) can identify the tools they need to re- ceive from the parties.</li> </ul>	posed findings of fact or some less formal version thereof.
S. Discuss the House Rules in Advance of the Hearing
Clarify any restrictions on communicating with witnesses during their testimony, or on the witness' attendance during the testimony of other witnesses.	Don't assume that you, the arbitrator(s) and opposing counsel all have the same practice experience background with respect to the handling of witnesses and other hear-

T. Propose Hearing Procedures That Maximize Time for Wiganized	tness Testimony and That Help Keep the Arbitrator(s) Or-
Keep housekeeping at the hearing to a minimum.	Don't burden the transcript with lengthy discussions un-
<ul> <li>Try to limit discussion of administrative details to the beginning or end of the hearing day.</li> </ul>	related to the merits. The transcript (even in paper form) should be user-friendly for the arbitrator(s) in preparing the award.
<ul> <li>Try to work out problems off the record and then confirm agreements on the record.</li> </ul>
Submit an order of presentation of witnesses in advance of the hearing.	Don't try to surprise the arbitrators with your next witness. Arbitrators like to prepare for witnesses too.
<ul> <li>Update the line-up at the end of each day for the next day.</li> </ul>
Have your next witness in the batter's box.	Don't waste expensive hearing time waiting for a witness who is stuck in traffic. Some arbitrators, and some clients who hear an arbitrator grousing about it, might hold it against you.
Make evidentiary objections briefly, in writing, and focused on significant matters; time the objections so as not to disrupt hearing flow.	Don't use evidentiary objections to break a witness' rhythm or to run the clock. Arbitrators recognize the tactic, and may deduct points from your credibility score and/or help the witness get back on track.
<ul> <li>Limit evidentiary objections during the hearing to important questions of time management, rel- evance, weight and confidentiality.</li> </ul>	Don't fuss over prejudice unless the evidence is irrelevant and borders on the outrageous. Arbitrators think they are too sophisticated to have to worry about becoming prejudiced, but might draw the line at attempts to delve into clearly non-probative personal matters.

Dos	Don'ts
Ask the arbitrator(s) whether closing arguments or post- hearing briefs would be more helpful.  • Ask the arbitrator(s) what points they would most like to be addressed in closing arguments and/or briefs, and adjust accordingly.	Don't just repeat in closing the themes you have been developing all through the case; address what's on the mind(s) of the arbitrator(s) at that point in the hearing. It is your last chance to put the arbitrator(s) at ease with respect to what may be bothering them about your case or
<ul> <li>This is not just about being courteous. You want to know what might be troubling the arbitrator(s) and you want to deal with it as best you can.</li> <li>Make use of arbitrator flexibility. For example, in some cases it might make sense to have a closing argument as to some issues plus a short brief on a point or two that are better addressed in writing, with a chart that the arbitrators might find helpful but requires a bit more time to prepare, etc.</li> </ul>	defenses.  Don't repeat arguments that are not essential to your case and that have not gotten any traction with the arbitrator(s) just because your client likes to hear them. You are not there to entertain or soothe the client but to get the client the best possible result.
Provide the arbitrator(s) with hearing transcripts at the same time you receive them.  • If you are getting daily copy, offer it.	Don't just do the minimum or the usual; go out of your way to make it as easy as possible for the arbitrator(s), particularly when doing so has no material impact on cost.
<ul> <li>Ask each arbitrator what form (paper, electronic, software) is preferred, and include any court re- porter index.</li> </ul>
Supply a joint, definitive, final list of all the documents in evidence.  • This is especially important in the larger-document cases or when exhibits have been moved into evidence without testimony.	Don't rely on the court reporter to provide the exhibit list if there are exhibits in evidence that were not used with witnesses or not formally moved in evidence on the record.
<ul> <li>Arbitrators like to have a reliable checklist to make sure they have reviewed and considered all the evi- dence in the record.</li> </ul>
U. Be Courteous to the End
Thank the arbitrator(s) and case manager, each by name, for their service and attention.	Don't just say thank you; when you say it, say it like you mean it.
Acknowledge the members of your team at all levels.
Thank the opposing attorney(s). If counsel was generally obstructive but cooperated in some small way, thank counsel specifically for that small detail even though (or perhaps because) it might seem like faint praise.
Acknowledge the hard-working junior members of the other side's team, including non-lawyers, for their contribution and cooperation, even if you cannot utter a word of thanks to lead counsel.

From the NYSBA Book Store

More than 30 of New York State's leading trial practitioners and other experts reveal the techniques and tactics they have found most effective when trying a civil lawsuit. Expert commentary and numerous practice tips guide you through all aspects of a civil lawsuit, from discovery to appeals. A thorough discussion of pretrial preparation and investigation will aid the attorney in obtaining an advantageous settlement even if the case never goes to trial.

Especially helpful are the excerpts from actual trial transcripts, which illustrate the effectiveness of certain lines of questioning. Trial attorneys will benefit by using the book to supplement and reinforce their own methods of practice. The 2016 Revision includes updates to the previous edition, as well as a new chapter on Attorney-Client Privilege.
