My practice focuses on construction law, commercial real estate disputes and alternative dispute resolution. My clients have included well-known companies of all sizes, including public companies and privately held companies and individuals. I have represented owner-developers, construction managers, general contractors, sub-contractors and the occasional design professional. My cases are complex and involve multiple parties, extensive electronic and paper document production and review, depositions of executives, project personnel and experts and substantive motions. The issues involve breach of contract, claims for extra work, claims for delay and disruption, claims for property damage including how to use insurance to cover these claims and mechanic's lien foreclosure. If the case cannot be settled through mediation, I am prepared to arbitrate or try the case and have done so in the federal and state courts before juries and before courts sitting without a jury.

I am admitted to practice law in the State of New York, Supreme Court of the United States, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and U.S. District Courts for the Southern, Eastern and Northern Districts of New York.

I recently left Duane Morris LLP, an AM Law 75 law firm, after 9 years as a partner to establish my solo law practice. I am a graduate of Duke University School of Law (1981) and Binghamton University (1978). I am AV® Preeminent™ Peer Review Rated by Martindale-Hubbell and have also been a Super Lawyer.
